A decrease in interest rules has created an increase of $25 in tuition for Wooster students next year. The move comes as a result of the Board of Trustees record, and is in accordance with the Board of Trustees' interest rate increase. Most of Wooster's students are in favor of the increase, and the Board of Trustees is pleased with the results. However, some students feel that the increase is too large and may be an obstacle to some of their fellow students. The Trustees hope that the increase will not be a deterrent to those who wish to continue their education at Wooster. The Trustees also hope that the increase will help to fund the university's various programs and activities. Wooster is one of the few universities in the state that has a decrease in interest rules. The Trustees plan to keep a close eye on the interest rate increase and make any necessary adjustments to ensure that the university remains financially stable.
Dr. Jack Hens, professor of history and teacher of the course "American History," is the subject of this year's student government elections. Hens is also a member of the Board of Trustees and has been instrumental in the development of the American Studies program at Wooster.

In the gym on Wednesday, the Wooster men's basketball team played their last game of the season against Kenyon College. Despite their recent losses, the team was confident in their ability to overcome the opposition.

The game started with a bang as Wooster took the lead early on. However, Kenyon fought back and managed to tie the score midway through the first half. Both teams continued to battle throughout the remainder of the game, with Kenyon maintaining their lead until the final moments. In the closing seconds, Wooster was able to tie the score once again, setting the stage for an exciting overtime period.

Unfortunately, the overtime period did not go as planned for Wooster. Kenyon capitalized on their opportunities and managed to secure a two-point lead with just under a minute remaining in the game. With time running out, Wooster attempted a last-second shot but missed, giving Kenyon the victory.

Despite the loss, the team has shown great resilience throughout the season, and their efforts are commendable. The team is looking forward to future opportunities and improvements to achieve even greater success in the upcoming season.
