Corrupt Army Comes Home

Herbert Fears Martial Law

Citing many examples of war crimes committed by the U.S. in Vietnam, Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert warned that "the Army is coming home," possibly resulting in a constitutional crisis or political turmoil if its power is not checked.

Concluding his Convocation address "The U.S. Army: A Preview of 1984," Herbert pointed to examples of increasing domestic military authority.

The military, he said, has already formulated Op Plans for major American cities. Op Plans, he described, are battle plans in phases to control the Op in day-to-day operations. Using war, if available, New Jersey's Op Plan, Herbert said, Gas, the second phase, is to be utilized if war is unavailable or proves ineffective. "Limited shooting" follows gas, with "full fire-power by selected marksmen" as the final step.

Pointing to the riots in Chicago, 1968, Herbert said that this was the first time troops were called-in before being requested by the Governor. The soldier to execute Op Plans has been conditioned so that he "doesn't blink an eye" when he strikes an American with his rifle butt. Asking, "What can be done planned?" he replied that "we can fire Nixon." He lied, Herbert said about the 55I. Indian-Pakistan War, Watergate incident and Vietnam.

Although Herbert said that he was "not involved with getting McGovern elected," he acknowledged getting the pit stop that he had helped write McGovern's plan to reforming the Department of Defense.

Vietnam was not the cause of our problems, he explains, but only magnified the "corruption and filth" that some officers had seen coming for 20 years.

The Pontiac, Herbert claimed, is now attempting to blame others for its failures in Vietnam. Former Chief of Staff, Gen. Westmoreland, has criticized the Army's "Project 1000,000" as a reason for lack of success in Vietnam. The Army took 220,000 men, Herbert explained, from ghettoes. Ninety percent were black; Herbert labels it "a racist program."

Herbert hopes to discourage reconsidered on page four.

Campus Council adopted a motion last Wednesday which would increase student representation on Committees for next year from 6 students to 9 by electing 3 more members-at-large.

Bob Newman, who proposed the amendment, felt that the current balance in Council of students (6 members) to faculty (3 members each) did not give students enough control over what he considered purely student affairs.

Since, as Ron Wilcox put it, "the legitimate power of Council is in areas of student social life," the students felt that the current Council should be greater than that of faculty and administrators.

By Ronald Fears

Peter Havholm questioned this reasoning, saying, "I'm very concerned about what students do, and I don't think that it's wise to make decisions between student and faculty interests." The two, he thought, were inseparable.

Newman then argued that the increase in student membership on Council would allow for a truer representation of the diversity of student opinion.

Council Chairman Jim Turner expressed skepticism on this point, commenting, "I'm not convinced that this diversity will happen unless some provision for that diversity is built in.

In spite of the objections, Council passed the motion, and a committee was then appointed by Turner to work out the details necessary to implement the plan in the spring elections.

SGA President John Browder then moved that Campus Council refer a proposal for an alternative to the foreign language requirement to the Educational Policy Committee.

Under this proposed policy a student could substitute a one-quarter course in cultural area studies for the current language requirement.

Reasoning that contact with foreign cultures and ideas could be gained as easily through coursework conducted in English as in a foreign language, Browder presented an outline of how this alternative requirement might be realized.

Objections to this proposal were raised on several fronts.

Jim Turner suggested that either the language requirement be dropped altogether or that it be substantially increased.

After voicing his assent to Turner's remark Peter Havholm pointed out that this proposal of Browder's would just "make a requirement easier without doing anything that is necessary for the student.

To which newly-elected SGA vice-president Bruce Arnold replied, "easier courses are very likely more valuable."

CC Adds Three Students

Third World Recruiters Outline Three-Fold Goals

Third-world Inner-City Committee (TWICC) is a group of students concerned with the recruitment of third-world and inner-city students on Wooster's campus.

1) Increase the bargaining power of these prospective students and students whose backgrounds are alien to them, and 3) help provide something for these people that has been not provided at any previous time--an opportunity.

A group of 5 students have thus far been actively involved with the organization and have been laying the groundwork for it. Janice Wong, Ray Sweet, and Joe Strejnowski, Janice Wong, Joe Strejnowski, and Haydee Pagan have been meeting and discussing what actions the group should and will take in its first year. At present, the group is looking for campus-wide student and administrative support in its efforts.

The action that has been taken has been limited to the Cleveland-Akron area and will consist of distributing pamphlets to the concerned high schools, writing letters to guidance counselors and students. A large part of the work after high school students will be college-oriented participants of Upward Bound programs. A weekend for prospective students will visit the campus being planned for the spring.

Ad in Potpourri for students interested in serving on the committee to plan this year's Homecoming Queen.

So in the spring of 1972, when the list of fall events was being scheduled, the Special Events Committee decided to drop these activities after consultation with Dean Coster, Dean Planche-le, the Director of Alumni Relations, Ed Arnold, and the Director of Lowery Center, Hal Closson. The Committee felt that the amount of time and money being expended on these activities was disproportionate to the interest being shown in them.

Students writing play, running from October 25 through 28, will be Brendan Behan's "Shoddy Hostage," Friday night dinner halls will be serving a special dinner. This will be followed by a pep rally at 7:30, then a tentatively scheduled Halloween party.

Rebuttal!

The second Colloquium lecture "Retraining Reality and Other Mindless Purveyors" will be delivered by Bradlee Karan on Wednesday, October 4 at 10 a.m. in McGraw Chapel.

This Social Science lecture is presented as a response to Peter Havholm's "Shoddy Thinking Exposed."
Dear Sir:

After reading Charles Gibson's commentary on abortion, I felt that he should bring forth some of the fallacies stated in his article. First of all he claims that abortion is murder. This is merely an overused concept that cannot even be backed up by science. There is no proof to date that life as we know begins prior to birth.

Another unsupported point is that proabortion writers have courage to face the world to suffer in the name of convenience; I believe this is not only untrue but absurd. Quality of life begins the day that is born into a world that is loving and wanting of them.

I feel I can understand the real necessity of abortion in our society because have seen some of the results of unwanted children being Chances are that these children will be in the community of our lives, this where quality of life is at its lowest. In my opinion abortion is the most humane of all, it is a way to avoid a child who is brought into the world. For one summer home for mentally I children. Most of these children were here because they were unwanted by their mothers. They have talked with some of the older kids at this home. Some of them are so unhappy they physically abuse their bodies...

New Hope? A Literary Phoenix

"Most people around here are crappy writers," asserted Tim Woodward, last year's editor of THISTLE, the traditional campus literary magazine. The editor continued, "It isn't a problem unique to Wooster—it's a reflection of the whole literary world right now... Modern poetry is so disappointing; unintelligible as seen from pro [humanism]. With these, our passion has become easier to understand."

Woody believed poor quality copy results from general solicitation announcements so he preferred to pursue those individuals in whom he had some measure of confidence in their writing abilities. This or itself may be somewhat difficult for a freshman to discover, particularly one who is a slow reader. Thistle already has been curtailed.

Larry Stewart, English professor and chairman of the Publications Committee, stated that senior Barbara Behrens, the original editor, did not turn in her formal resignation until well in the fall quarter, 1971. Thus, Tom was not offered the position until after winter quarter, and with the arrival of spring quarter comes the announcement of new publication heads. Stating that no money had been lost as the THISTLE editorship is not a paid position and the $330 allotment was left untouched, Stewart turned his attention to the new THISTLE editors for this year: Dave Dunlop and Jane Stribling. They hope to evolve the short story/poetry format into an approach which embraces more individualism, at the same time, with greater emphasis on personal essay. "I think we (THISTLE publication last year) might have been a good thing," mused Stewart.

"It allowed us to evaluate the students and the like of a campus literary magazine and has given added impetus towards this year's publications."

Abortion: The Other Sides

By Chuck

One of the main reasons I registered to vote in my home state of Michigan is that on November 7, there will be a ballot proposal regarding an abortion law repeal. More than any other issue, I want to mark the "yes" box on this one!

I don’t think Ohio has gotten to this stage, and it very well could be due to the illogic of people (if not specifically females) like you. Unfortunately, I do not accept your logic that abortion is murder and that the word violate is not a word "thought of in the context of the definition of ‘thoughts’ appeared in last week’s VOICE (Abortion— ‘False’ Thoughts)."

Gibson begins his article with the bulk assumption: ‘1) all human beings have the right to live provided they do not violate the lives of others, 2) to violate human life is murder. This is the message the writer states, whereas the word violate I have trouble with, Violate, how? Physically? Mentally? Socially? Then, just when it is beginning to get clear, he brings this heavy footnote on us, the sake of clarity, let us consider only the case in which a physically or mentally woman is pregnant with a physically healthy child."

Clarity! I hardly think this clarifies anything, but rather ignores a great deal! First of all, some states will not allow an abortion in any case, whether the woman’s or child’s life is in danger or not. How about the woman who has been impregnated during the statutory period, and yet does not wish to have the child? This is not an untruth, so now what? Perhaps, as so many states (including Ohio) may be allowed to have abortions if their physical or mental health is or will be impaired.

Gibson is against abortion on demand because he believes ‘1) the fetal child is a living human being and therefore has a right to life!’ Unfortunately I do not accept his defense of this position because a fetus is not ‘a rat, a hog, or an oak tree’, it is necessarily a human being! Then he says: ‘the moral in this: the parastic fetal-child, derives from this relationship no diminishment in her obligation to respect the rights of her guest. ‘What is this? an ‘obligation’ and not a privilege? How many of you women reading this consider it your duty to bear children anyone seems Queen Victoria last on your mind aware of the expenses and sacrifices necessary to bear a child, let alone raise one? Yet, Gibson’s definition of abortion comes to only one: the woman ‘derive from this relationship no maternity-pay, and some even lose their jobs! (See Marty’s cartoon) This is where the abortion issue is with...nobody forced into it. True enough, my friend! Many of the same people who would have women giving birth, but without all the aid and support are also opposed to child care centers, increased ADC, and job quotas that would ease the burden.

Now let us turn to Mr. Gibson’s circular definition that he is so proud of and the axioms he claims follow from it: ‘a human being is one having human parentage , Great! Notice that such plausibility also fit this definition: a sanatorium, for instance. Were Adolf Hitler, Richard Speck, and Charles Manson considered rational? No

His next half truth is: ‘in no parent-child relationship is the child subject before the law to his parents’ whims.’ ‘In fact, just the opposite, laws made in order to protect the child. For example, Mr. Gibson, without their parents’ signatures. And as for childhood? It may be even more legal for one to beat or harm a child (this is an axiom in the same way whole hell of a lot easier to conceal!"

The writer comments that a mother should have no more control of the fetus than the post-natal child. In other words this words ‘domination beyond that found in the normal relationship between a mother and child’ is the fetal child is a human being, distinct from its mother. That is, I believe, the crux of his argument as well as an untruth. I mean, who was it just a few paragraphs ago that referred to the parastic fetal-child?"

As for Mr. Gibson’s warnings of ‘world gap’, it seems to me he is writing about quite a few misconceptions. Nobody know of is advocating abortion of college students, and certainly not ‘the child of a rape victim’ murder? For example, when one of the Apollo flights ran into technical difficulties, it was not a case of the astronauts being short of the life of the astronauts. So the word can have positive connotations, a child can be ‘unborn or born’. A fetus is definitely ‘unborn’

SO NOW WHO IS TRYING TO CONFUSE THEM!! Finally, his reducing the pro-abortion arguments to one of the most ridiculous is the claim of sacrifice. The person of itself in his reference to the ‘quality of life’ after having pleaded throughout ten paragraphs in the name of humanity.

It is in the interest of this country that the New York legislatureari supporting legislation that endorses the morality of millions on millions of women in that state, by trying to make women breathe, whistle, or anything that could have an abortion. Carrying mason jars packed with fetuses in formaldehyde, they jammed the galleries, and shouted their views, whooped that had other people’s article with. (It is time for the forces of life to arise) During the debate, the members of congress were to be recognized, walked to the podium, and faced the jeering galleries."

"You have my babies in bottles!" she exclaimed, "I only wish I had a bottle big enough to hold the three women in my district who died last month on the kitchen table of some quick abortion."

Will the real humanists please stand up!

Some of the signs had been already lighted in Oxford, \( \text{Havholm Exposed} \) and \( \text{Havholm's Shoddy Thinking Exposed} \). Following this, officially Peter Havholm and a speech entitled \( \text{Shoddy Thinking Exposed} \) opened the Freshman Colloquium Series last Wednesday in the Physical Education Center. …

Mr. Havholm in his last twenty minutes made a definite attempt at the world words-per-minute record. The speaker was too hurried, too confusing, and difficult to follow, making it difficult for the observer to differentiate a point from a joke. It seemed that Havholm had made some good points, and this style was refreshingly lively and humorous.

Bubba On Graffiti

Last spring an article appeared in Voice regarding campus graffiti. It was a bold analysis of graffiti writing among students and its proper role in an academic community such as ours. It was an article that individuals went so far as to suggest that in the future a Interdepartmental 399 concerning graffiti, its nature, and latent function, might be worked out. What kind of people write on walls? We can see these modern day hieroglyphs tell us about our collective existence here on campus? Are we able or at least interested in answering these questions? There have been some major shifts in the nature of graffiti on this campus. On the that those who spend little time in Andrews Center may not be aware. Andrews Center ushered in a period of campus for the American people. Poster placing poster paper in the mens' rooms of the library this past week.

For obvious reasons this writer did not verify the presence of students of different social classes' opinions on this subject. It would be so as to ask that any one interested in the future of this paper please contact the writer. A poster displayed on the wall of a first year student's room stated, "Its time for some systy."

"I am sick and tired of this segregation! Let's all write together!"

Reaction to the introduction of the graffiti boards has not been entirely positive, however. Following an obscuration of words, one writer stated, "I'd rather write on the walls." Another, less cooperative dishearted of graffiti denied this just explaining, "Sorry, but writing on the wall is the real thing." The author of another passage, a bit more cynically, wisely moped the campus community, when he wrote: "This sign is near. Who did this? Could it be the school's active progressive student-oriented organizations?" Still another wrote, "This is really incredible."

In terms of actual contents the graffiti boards contain passages on a wide range of subject matter. In one case a student wrote some rather acrimonious comments under the title "Why are the Republicans?" and "Why are the Republi..."

The postponement, then cancellation of the White Roots peace film appeared to be the culmination of a conflict which, in the words of one Indian nation for years. Of the 6,000 Mohawks who inhabit the United States-Canada border, a 40-year-old Indian progressive faction which supported the elected council with a clear indication over the area according to New York law and the public support of the rest support the rival traditional tribal council, a relatively unknown body known as "long house." The tension between the factions began several years ago when a slate of traditional leaders running against the elected council, defeated the progressives, and passed their programs. The state, which had always supported the elected council, began to give political jobs to progressives, and some leaders were exiled from the election under armed guard.

Facts Challenged

Arguably very few Indians voted, the state succeeded last week in removing elected offices to the progressive faction and diminishing the power of the long house. Since 1969, however, the traditionalists have gained more resources and power within the nation, which has caused a good deal of apprehension among the elected council. The traditionalists, for example, published a newspaper of American Indian news, which is distributed and supported two groups of chiefs who travel to different parts of the state to support the White Roots of Peace films and Indian culture programs promoting the traditional way of life. This week a couple of Indian women bought an 80-90 acre plot of land for $800, the reservation, which she turned over to the traditional council as it was 80 acres. The traditionalists could live by themselves and preserve their way of life. The land had been purchased through the federal government, and they would want to sell it to developers, the two factions were forced into head-on conflict.

The confrontation, which was the result of the initial postponement of the White Roots program, broke out Saturday, September 16. The supporters of the elected council gathered together and refused to allow the traditionalists onto their land. The state of New York considered the confrontation a civil disorder and refrained from getting involved. At first, Police were present at the scene and made a token arrest of one of the elected council leaders.

The state's next move was to arrest a white man, Mr. Gamble, an adopted member of the tribe and editor of the traditionalist's newspaper on a trumped-up illegal immigration charge. Gamble was asked to leave the country last Wednesday but refused. In response to pressure from the White House to drop the immigration case, a hearing on Gamble's case was scheduled for Thursday, September 26. A hearing on the land dispute, scheduled for Thursday is set, was postponed until the 28th.

An attempt by the White Roots to reschedule a third time would be "foolish," but LCB would consider sponsoring an appearance next spring. According to the Royce-Carlton Agency which arranges the White Roots appearances, the chaos within the state "is just a temporary attempt at rescheduling unlikable, but there is a possibility of a spring appearance."

More on Herbert

Herbert Fears Martial Law

At the outset of his Congregation address and later in an interview, Lt. Col. Anthony Herbert questioned the credibility of facts and sources cited in a September 25 Voice article. "My memory is very, very sound," Herbert remarked, in response to the so-called James gordon's charge that his "faulty memory" confused the about 50,000 troops committed during the Korean War. "I never witnessed a war crime in Korea," he added later. November 5, 1971 Pershing Post Fact Sheet reports that Herbert's command is in Vietnam, including Gen. John Barnes, and Col. J. Ross Franklin, retired. "Of command of his battalion on 4 April, 1969 for uncontested supply of duty," the report states. In Herbert points out, Barnes said that Herbert had the beat tactical battalion under his command.

Also, according to Herbert, the command was in Vietnam but he did not speak up until "there is not a single month after having been rejected by his command," does not appear to be substantiated by the government's evidence, Secretary of the Army, Robert Proshieke, in a study done January 24, 1972, shows Herbert making war crimes charges one year before his appeal was denied. This document entitled "Case 52792," according Herbert, contains 35 statements that support his character.

The Arizona Republic reported the Rev. Charles Davis' conversation with Herbert allegedly said, "I have no goddamned integrity, I'll say anything to get what I want." Herbert discounts Davis' claim, explaining that Davis has since publicly admitted that he did not make that statement.

Finally, Captain Mike Plants, commanding officer in Vietnam, told Time that "Herbert used his fists and feet." But Herbert is quoted as saying that he used his fists and feet in Vietnam. In the interview, Herbert said that "he never served in Vietnam, and that a friend of Herbert's was the pilot." Herbert proposes to have the military finance officer's investigation in a public or private institution.

The introduction was given by John Gates. Herbert termed Herbert "the very best one can expect of a military officer," and noted that "he was most decorated enlisted man in the Korean War." Lt. Col. Herbert resigned from the Army after serving 20 years in Korea and Vietnam.

He graduated from the University of Pittsburgh where he received a B.A. in English literature and later an M.A. He is presently working on his Ph.D., in psychology, expecting to complete it within a year.

Soldier, a book written by Herbert, is scheduled for publication in late summer or early fall, 1972. The July, 1972 issue of Playboy carries an interview with Herbert.

His appearance in McGaw last Wednesday was sponsored by the Cultural Events Committee.

Galpin To Open Investment File In Quarterly Report

By Richard Kleblowicz

Publication of the first quarterly report on the College's endowment fund is slated for mid-October, reported Walter B. Wiley, Assistant Vice-President for Finance and Business.

This report will list College holdings, their performance during the quarter and the "pay-out" from the endowment covering operating expenses. In addition, the first report should include a statement on the College's philosophy regarding socially responsible investment.

These reports will be made available to the public, Wiley remarked. The policy of disclosing Wooster's investments was adopted by the Board of Trustees at their June 10, 1972 meeting. Several problems prevented the adoption of this policy earlier, Wiley said. Some holdings were contributed by people wishing to remain anonymous. Also, Wiley was negotiating the sale of holdings to private corporations.

Finally, there was a substantial restructuring of the portfolio over a period of months. It would have been difficult to reveal investments, Wiley elaborated, when they were changing daily. Disclosure would have revealed that over a nine month period the number of securities was reduced from 100 to 40 or 50.

Once there were no more holdings by people desiring to remain anonymous, and all sales to private interests completed and restating finished, the Board was free to open the portfolios.

"This was coming anyhow, it goes back at least two years," Wiley commented, speaking about the move to open the investment files, Wiley's position is relatively new at Wooster. The Trustee's Committee on Finance decided early in 1971 to seek "full-time managers, inside or outside of Wooster, for the endowment funds," said Wiley. This would allow the College to purchase a more aggressive investment policy.

While primarily involved with endowment management, Wiley also "handles certain banking activities for the College in cooperation with Hana Jeney, Vice-President for Finance and Business, and William Spody, Treasurer."

Managing $14 million of the College's securities is Wiley's responsibility. He said, "In accordance with the policy and guidelines set down by the Finance Committee, his investment policy is "to maximize the total return (appreciation and income) of the funds over the long term." The Investment Committee, a subcommittee of the Board's Finance Committee, ratifies his transactions and selection of securities.

Wooster returned from a meeting on Monday in New York with other members of The Common Funds (GPF)-Colleges' Trust. TFC is described in its first annual report as a non-profit corporation which has been founded to enable colleges, universities and independent schools to join together in obtaining professional management of their endowment and other long-term investment funds." The College now has $1 million invested in TFC and expects to transfer another $1 million within a few weeks.

Before coming to Wooster, Wiley 38, was with the Ford Foundation in New York City. There he investigated and advised investment strategy for the $1.1 billion portfolio. He is a graduate of De Pauw University in Greencastle, Ind., where he majored in English and mathematics. Wiley is also a 1962 graduate of the Harvard Graduate School of Business Administration.

The motion was finally defeated after a lengthy debate, 4-6-1. However, Turner suggested that Council consider other alternatives to the present language requirement and formulate them for presentation to the Educational Policy Committee.

Among several individuals approaching Council to request its support was Arthur McCombe, a black student in the political science department, who solicited $600 from Council to finance a trip for him and four others to the National Conference of Black Political Scientists in New Orleans this spring.

Ken Pluesse and Peter Havlom said that funds for the trip should be sought from the Black Student Association and SGA, both of which receive funds from Campus Council. Council chairman Jim Turner reported that only three living-camps had submitted social codes to Council before the deadline of the third week of school. Members of Council could not decide what action should be taken against those who were tardy.

Athletic events will begin Saturday morning at 10 a.m., first with field hockey, then soccer, cross country and the football game against Heidelberg. At halftime, the Scott band will present a special 15 minute show. A reception for alumni on the Lowry Center patio will follow the game. That evening there will be a steak dinner in the dining halls, followed by a semi-formal dance from 9 p.m. until 1 a.m.

The Commitee hopes that this new format will allow the alumni to get a more representative view of the campus, as it is during the year.

In addition, by moving away from the money-raising sponsored events which lack student participation, Wooster's Homecoming, the Specia- l Events Committee hopes, can raise more money and activities sponsored by different student groups in which more students will participate.

Scot Booters Stop Muskingum; Even Record At 1-1

By Al Banda

After dropping the season opener by a score of 4-0 to a very strong Akron "Zips" team the day before, the Fighting Scot soccer team bounced back to humiliate Muskingum with an impressive 6-1 victory last Saturday.

The Akron Game, Wooster's second, typically speaking, soccer knows no size especially when pitted against a team where 'brutal' or physical soccer is concerned size of the field would make a significant difference.

Consequently, the Scots had theirs hands full as they tried to contain the "Zips" physical but balanced attack. In fact, even man for man the Zips seemed to have an edge over the Scots, especially since a good number of Scots played below par due to injuries sustained during the game.

Co-captain Nelson Lui, Craig Levinisky, Tom Kazembe, Jean Patterson & Joe Mrr were among those injured during the game.

Scots vs. Muskingum, Wooster 6, Muskingum 1. The Fighting Scot soccer team opened the season's home stand against Muskingum last Saturday in what appeared to be an exciting but one-sided game.

Co-captain Nelson Lui started the potential scoring attack which resulted in a powerful shot, which the Muskie goalie deflected into the penalty area, only to find center forward Nelson Liti-willer ready with a well-placed rebound shot into the net.

The Scots kept their balanced attack on Muskingum for the remainder of the first half. However, it was Nelson Litwiller who came back to score to put the Scots ahead 3-0 by halftime.

The second goal came after a hard shot by Larry Cierwood and rebounded into the penalty area only to find the ever present Litwiller ready to control and boot it home. A couple of minutes later the Muskie goalie once again found himself unable to hold onto the ball, this time from a corner kick taken by Dan Kriebel. This was with moving Litwiller capitalized on the loose ball and powered it into the net for his third goal of the day.

The second half action starred rather fast, with only 36 seconds into the second half the Scots were on the scoreboard once again with goal #4. This time it was co-captains Billy Clyde and Nelson Lui who executed the scoring attack. Lui, after maneuvering his opponent, drove the ball to Clyde who powered it into the net.

Minutes later it was freshman Ted Ludwig who found room into the upper left corner of the goal, with a brilliant executed hook shot, it was the Scots goal #5 and Ludwig's first as a varsity player.

Tom Kazembe's exciting footwork and outstanding play finally materialized into goal #6 for the Scots on an assisted play with about 10 minutes gone in the second half, Kazembe took the ball from around midfield easily beat the Muskie defenders one by one as they came, and finally from about 25 yards out hit a superbly executed shot, that left the Muskingum goalie defenseless, into the upper right hand corner of the net.

Seeing action for most of the second half were the Scots JV's with the exception of the outstanding Howe Cohen in the goal. The Scots JV's outplayed Muskingum for the most part, but it was Muskingum who finally scored on a fast break by Ryder with only 5 minutes to go in the game.

In general the Scots played an impressive game against Muskingum in spite of the absence of Craig Levinisky, Sam Patterson, Joe Mrr and Dave Byars due to injuries sustained in the Akron game. The Scots moved the ball around with a smooth understanding for most of the match with Cohen, Hallo-well, Kriebel, Kazembe, Litwiller knitting together fluently where the loose balls are collected. Also co-cap-tain Nason Lui and freshman Yohannas Chonde made good use of the right and left flanks respectively.

Nelson Litwiller was the "star" of the day. His timing, passing and ball control were just superb.

"It's not often when you substitute a center forward and get 3 goals out of him," Nye commented. "Nelson played a heck of a nice job today," praised the coach. The Scots take their 1-0 record to Crawfordsville, Indiana this weekend where they will participate in a four-team tournament which includes Albion, Calvin and Wabash.

FIGHTING SCOT FOOTBALL COACHING STAFF

L. R. (front) - Dave Poetter '71 - def. backfield coach; Roger Walsh - def. coordinator; Pat O'Brien - head coach; Lu Wims '61 offensive line coach.

Scotties Bombed In Season Opener

Playing on a rain-soaked field, the Scots lost their season opener on Saturday to Albion, 23-0. The Wooster offensive line unexpectedly held the Scots scoreless, which made the biggest difference in the contest.

Coach Jones indicated that more time playing together was needed for the team to achieve their full potential. The rest of the season still looks promising, because the Wooster team has eight returning starters, and many talented newcomers. Two unbroken weeks of practice are now possible, as the next confrontation will be at Valley Farm, Michigan, on October 7.

The Pant-Leg has done it again! We're bringing you:

We invited a few friends for dinner and they helped clean up the Genesee River.

With the aid of a few thousand pounds of microorganisms, we're helping to solve the water pollution problem in Rochester. Maybe the solution can help others.

What we did was to combine two processes in a way that gives us one of the most efficient water-purifying systems private industry has ever developed.

One process is called "activated sludge," developed by man to accelerate nature's microorganism adsorption. What this means is that for the majority of wastes man can produce, there is an organism waiting somewhere that will happily assimilate it. And thrive on it.

The breakthrough came when Kodak scientists found a way to combine the activated sludge process with a trickling filter process and optimized the combination.

We tested our system in a pilot plant for five years.

(At Kodak, we were working on environmental improvement long before it made headlines.) And the pilot project worked so well, we built a ten-million-dollar plant that can purify 36-million gallons of water a day.

Governor Rockefeller called this "the biggest voluntary project undertaken by private industry in support of New York State's pure-water program."

Why did we do it? Partly because we're in business to make a profit—and clean water is vital to our business. But in furthering our own needs, we have helped further society's. And our business depends on society.

We hope our efforts to cope with water pollution will inspire others to do the same. And, we'd be happy to share our water-purifying information with them. We all need clean water. So we all have to work together.

Kodak
More than a business.
