CHALLIS PRESENTS CONCERT TONIGHT

Sections Choose Living Quarters

Men Will Occupy Beall, Bowman, and Campus Dorms Soon

The allotment of rooms to the men who participated in the fight for the University during the past winter was announced by Dr. Joseph A. Anspach today at a meeting of the action committee in the Junior room on Jan. 23. As the report of the action committee was presented, all those present could sense their own individuality as students growing; they will live together. The sessions will continue next week.

Campus Lodge

The Campus Lodge will be temporarily occupied by the men beginning this month, according to Dr. Anspach. The Campus Lodge, which has been on the west side of campus since its inception, is now available for student recreation as well as study. All students will have access to the facilities. Students with academic, social, or cultural interests are welcome to find a place in the Lodge.

Old Mill Manor, Bowman dormitory during the winter, temporarily vacated, has been occupied by old-time residents of the University from the time they were freshmen. In such cases, the number of fellows has been increased to 15.

The old Conservatory, Beall dormitory for the old-timers of the first, second, and third years, is set aside for the second floor and first floor rooms of the Bowman Dormitory. Old Mill Manor will take the second floor and will be used for a temporary dormitory for the second floor.

In conclusion, it is sincerely hoped that the future of the dormitories will be controlled as much as possible by the students who have first and second years of eight and ninth grades.

Varieties of Juke

The jukebox was the concern of Joe Bradburn, who was an aficionado of the music. However, the jukebox does not have to be a jukebox. It can be a jukebox with a variety of music and also a jukebox with a variety of meanings. The jukebox is not limited to music; it can be used for other purposes as well.

War and Peace - Aims Discussed at Conference

The conference on War and Peace, held this past weekend, was scheduled for a discussion on the subject. Professor E. R. Miller, head of the political science department, and Mr. W. Miller, assistant professor of history, were key speakers at the conference. The conference was well attended and included discussions on the causes and effects of war.

Mr. Miller presented an argument that war is inevitable and that peace should be a goal. He discussed the role of nations in international relations and the importance of diplomacy and negotiation. Mr. Miller's arguments were well-represented and received significant attention.

The conference concluded with a panel discussion featuring Mr. Miller, Mr. W. Miller, and other experts in the field. The panelists discussed the current state of international relations and the future of peace. The panel was well-attended and provided valuable insights into the complex issues surrounding war and peace.

Student Senate Sees Tentative Date For Wooster Color Day

April 25th has been tentatively set as the date for the annual Wooster Color Day. The decision was announced by the Student Senate to prepare for the event. The Senate's decision was made after considering the needs of both students and the community.

Roses Were Red

The first 17th and 18th-century music was presented in the Conservatory on Jan. 23. The music was performed by the students, who provided a captivating performance that captivated the audience.

The concert featured a variety of works from composers such as Handel, Mozart, and Beethoven. The music ranged from the baroque era to the classical era, showcasing the diversity and richness of the 17th and 18th-century music.

The concert was well-received by the audience, who enjoyed the music and the performance. The students demonstrated their skill and dedication to the art of music, and the concert was a testament to the talent and hard work of the students.

NICE WORK, BIG FOUR

The BIG FOUR has been doing a very fine job of late in providing some entertainment and interest for the students. When the Big Four rooms which were located in the east side of lower Kuretake were taken over for classrooms, the upper and two upper rooms with their equipment were turned over to the Navy men as dormitories. For the present at least, without any great sacrifice, the roommates could not possibly offer any better suggestion for the college equipment.

At present the Big Four with the aid of Westminster Church is arranging for the present residence hall to be turned over to the one in Bethel. We understand that the Navy prefers this type of arrangement so that they may have their room work done by others with the benefit of the present system.

Personally we believe it is taken care of by the college. This type of arrangement will not only save the Big Four the goal in the drive last fall. At that time Big Four would not be able to use their rooms as such and have great trouble in finding the spot in which to place the student money.

In addition the Big Four feeling it is better to use the best place convenient for the student body.

At the beginning of the fall semester the Student navigation was found with no little trouble in arranging for the various club schedules so that it was hoped that the students would be able to use their room work done by others with the benefit of the present system.

Now, however, evening and Saturday morning classes are arranged and the residence hall is not in such bad shape as they are set up. They are particularly attracted and are interested in the social life of the college. The dormitories are clean and well furnished with everything that is needed. In the dormitories are a comfortable chair, a desk, a chair, a fan, and a reading lamp. The dormitories are also equipped with a large window and a small table with a lamp.

We suggest that some of the department clubs, if interested, should have an occasional dormitory seminar or social affairs so as to be better acquainted with the students. These dormitories are quite large and the students have been very much pleased with them.

Dishand Clubs

BEEKANGROW and crowding of the college classrooms has brought about another confining situation for the student body. We are told that this condition is about to be improved by the addition of a new dormitory.

After and before the so-called "lunch" hour, there is usually a great deal of noise in the dormitories. We find some beds are likely to be left after a meal and the room will be left without permission. We suggest that students in the dormitories be reminded of the fact that the dormitories are not to be occupied after a meal and that the room is not to be left without permission.

Before our going to the dormitories we are usually awakened by the noise of the students. We find that some students are likely to leave their dormitories without permission and that the dormitories are likely to be occupied by students who are not in residence.

Women's win over Mount Union for second straight week was a victory for the seniors. In fact, the Mount Union team was led by 10 seniors. For several years Mount Union has had only a few home games and home wins with the Seniors in attendance. This year they have had a chance to see the team play when the regular games were played. The Women's Team was not the only one that was ineligible according to the conference rules, as all seniors in the conference are not required to attend the games. This year the conference was played on the basis of the regular season of five games.

The Women's Team was a team built by Coach Bill Chell of Wooster. The team was composed of four freshmen and three sophomores. The team was coached by Coach Bill Chell, who has been with the team for two years. The team was led by Captain Kay Pohlman, who has been with the team for three years. The team was also led by Captain Mary Johnson, who has been with the team for two years. The team was also led by Captain Carol Knoll, who has been with the team for one year. Unexpected Diet May Come From For Food Shortages

In MARY ISABEL LOVE’s book, "A Wile’s Guide to Food Shortages, 1941", she discusses the impact of wartime conditions on diet. Wartime conditions often led to food shortages due to increased demand and limited supply. This resulted in rationing, restrictions on food consumption, and the need to find alternative sources of nutrition. The book includes recipes and methods for preserving food to ensure that families could still eat well even when food was scarce.

College Chooses Head Residents for New Dorms

WOMEN from a crew with more study plans were selected as head residents for the new dorms at the University of Minnesota. The dorms, which are being built to accommodate the growing number of female students, will include living quarters for both men and women. The selection process was based on academic performance, leadership qualities, and commitment to the college community.
