College Receives Grant for Nuclear Equipment

Wostzer has received a grant of $4,959 from the Atomic Energy Commission to purchase nuclear equipment, part of which is already installed.

The physics department, in its new expansion of facilities, is now preparing for several physics experiments involving Geiger-Muller tubes, cinematography in radioactivity, beta and gamma particle absorption, radioactive decay rates, and activity of a small cobalt-60 source.

Training Lab

The chemistry department has used this year's grant from BLSF to build a physical laboratory to be used in physical, analytical, and organic chemistry classes. The department is installing fundamental radiation measurement apparatus and a radiochemical laboratory for studying radiochemical substances.

The biology department, which received a grant for a radiocobalt detector equipment which received $1,700, will be able to use it for the study of radiation physics in general, particularly the study of cellular or biological properties of organisms.

AIC Investigators

This year, the AIC has announced several research projects to be undertaken by the AIC.

The grant to Dr. R. J. Stephenson will be used to establish a new department of radiation biology.

Dr. William F. Kueffer, Dr. Clark H. Minnich, and Dr. James Louskik of the University of Wisconsin will establish a new department of environmental radiation.

Dr. Donald W. Jordan will continue to study the effect of ionizing radiation on plants.

In addition to these departments, the new equipment will be used for the study of nuclear power and independent study projects.

Dr. Donald Wise will use the new equipment for the study of radiation biology and radiation medicine.
Overcritical Students?

Student Senators, Faize and other student leaders have attempted to work with the college administration this year in a "climate of cooperation." "The rule of thumb," Faize said, "is to look down last spring, did not presume an absence of criticism. Rather, it was expected that student criticism would be constructive, he expressed. What we have seen is that the college in mind and deal with important matters.

However, Dean Bricker indicated at Tuesday's Student Faculty Meeting that he may take action as he sees fit with what he considers to be excess student criticism.

In no uncertain terms, the Dean said that he feels that students have not run the college, but that the way the college is being run, they don’t have to stay.

We disagree with the Dean. We believe that this is an unspoken part of the activity of the college, and particularly of the stand Student Government has taken this year.

Students remain human beings, and as such, are bound to criticize. A distinction should be made between off-hand injuries and valued criticism which will lead up to what he considers to be excess student criticism.

The "Wait," the Representative re- phrased the action to the particular element of commonsense so that when only lib' say, Faize said, "I think that when overworked area activities which amount to spending was "cooked," there..."

Conservative shudder to think of the national debt at $20.7 billion. What they are to that is, the national debt as a percentage of gross national product would not com- nor. A growing economy must maintain this constant percent- ge as a part of the concept of sound policy.

Everywhere, the government must, and will, not without a column "Economics of National Life." Why then, the cost of living is, too high, the strain on the national debt, and the burden of the tax?

Everyone knows it's common sense that my family can't keep spending more than it takes in. The government's the same way.

This is the "common sense" that the conservatives (and a good many "liberals," too) are so proud of, especially after a hearing the President's proposal to cut with its consequence on the national debt. Suppose everyone could call it common sense; in this case I can't see there's anything left but the national debt. A better investment.

And, that, and will, not without a column "Economics of National Life.

The government must, and will, not without a column "Economics of National Life."

Three Enjoy Swarthmore Conference

by Al Arkran

The three WooSto students who attended Swarthmore's college on Democracy and Development in Latin America returned here very much pleased by the experience.

The delegates, Al Arkran, and萱 Murphy, said that "the number and quality of the discussions were so impressive that I don't know what I was doing." The main goal, and the main goal, was to form a forum of discussion.

Key speakers were Ambassador Arthur A. McDonald, Assistant for the American Society of America; Hugh B. Latimer, Executive Director of the Inter-American Development of the University of Pennsylvania; the Latin American Development Center, a large number of foreign observers representing the various constituents of the South American development conference.

The next game for the Team is against the Sphinx. The Sphinx have been playing well, and the Team will have to be on top of their game to come out on top.

French Department Presents Play

Eugene Ionesco's play, 'La Cantatrice Chauve,' will be presented May 21 by the Department of French.

The production, directed by Miss Gretchen Felgen, will be in French, but participation is not limited to those taking French.

Interested students with a reasonable command of the language may either come to the rehearsal, which takes place the fifth hour on Tuesdays and Thursdays in Kebbe 227, or talk with Miss Felgen about trying out.

Those interested in being on the stage crew may sign the list on the door of Kebbe 231.

Copies of the play are available at the bookstore.
