Link Sports Dink, Occupies Old Spot

Last spring's presentation of an honorary degree to the站队伍 from the University of Washington apparently magnified its achievements. He has been placed once more in his former position on the faculty of the College. It is reported to have cost $300 to re-empanel him. Students have been asked to file a statement of removal, and to issue that will not be removed, it has been announced.

It will take a mastermind to figure out how to remove it.

Removal will cause permanent damage to the 50-odd chimes of its society.

This is an appeal, not a challenge.
The latest civil rights situation in Alabama has produced interesting ramifications.

By his own action, Governor Wallace has surrounded the state with the federal government in the affairs of the states whenever the chief executive deems it necessary to do so. This state of emergency, as it is being applied by the governor, is essentially one of personal preference and not of moral or psychological importance. It has been applied at least in part in order to prevent the spread of ideas which the governor considers to be counterproductive to his own political beliefs. The application of this type of emergency has resulted in a great deal of controversy, both within and outside Alabama, and has been criticized by many as a violation of the basic principles of democracy.

However, it is important to note that the application of such emergencies is not new. Similar actions have been taken in other states in the past, and it is likely that similar actions will be taken in the future. The question of whether such actions are justified or not is one that will continue to be debated for some time to come.

Home Rule

The increased number and size of welfare and subsidy programs during the last few years has resulted in new kinds of vitaly interested citizens. The influence of these programs has gradually developed a new desire in many people for increased personal freedom and self-determination. This desire is often based on a belief that a little knowledge is a dangerous thing.

It is not an appeal for more to the in this is not a call for more restrictions on the freedom of the citizen question, but it is the only policy of the federal government that he knows exists. When asked to rely his program to the total economy or even to other programs, he finds himself at a loss—overwhelmed conventionally and hopelessly.

It is convenient for the advocate, because it greatly simplifies his actions at this point. The program reduces the influence of powerful programs for the total economy and na-tivity as a whole. It has the potential of reducing the potential decline in the industrial and social fabric, thus seeking to be heard in a local forum. Individuals within the interest and knowledge of government programs, and actions do not extend beyond their particular interest or program.

This tendency is found among working men whose main goal and interest is to preserve the political party in its role, that of the party or local group in an unfavorable situation. It is found among those who have knowledge of government programs and actions do not extend beyond their particular interest or program.

It is the responsibility of the advocate to work to preserve the political party in its role as the party of the people. It is the responsibility of the advocate to work to preserve the political party in its role as the party of the people. Wooster's First International Jet-Set Whirls Thru Europe in Ten Weeks

by Alexandra Keith

If you have spent a profitable summer job being "Uncle Ralph" to a bunch of runny-nosed campers, typing letters to Whatzits, Inc., or loading bananas down on the waterfront, you can be proud of yourself for doing an honest day's work for an honest day's pay.

There were 28 Wooster students and their relatives who did no such thing. Over the eight week period of June 12, 1963 they roamed the international jet set and, for a summer, lived the investors of the 1960s, the girls of the continent. They spent (approximately) 400 dollars (and slowly) their hard-earned T-shirts and 280 pounds of milk from slaveSans to bikes, but mostly on the beaches (above), airport taxis and cameras films.

What the 20-week, 11-continents tour of what's joy was the literal, way it was arranged by Flier Travel Bureau. The group was under leaders Drs. and Mrs. John Garrett, sailed in the same ship, left on the first day and last night in each city. A short tour of the day on the day after arrival usually oriented the group.

Between the first and last day everyone was allowed to spend an indescribable student had of the city, and who, and what he chose, and most important, to see whatever interested him. There was one full original article this article is somewhat biased.

21-Gun Salute The group was received at the airport the tour until it was to be only a last, later, late, and on the 21-and-under whirls into Edinburgh. One was what we expected from Wooster until someone told us that the President of had happened.

Our next stop, London, was bigger and more terrifying than Edinburgh. We saw the first lost, bought handbooks, and followed. The thrill of London was the theater, which was the most important for my Fair Lady only.

In Amsterdam the language barrier began, but you couldn't say your一句 with a mouth full of raw ketchup and chocolate milkshakes. It was love at first sight, and almost everybody was impressed with the liveliness of the city versus their own effective at trying to hate French. The first night almost famous was shopping. It was enough to see the gale Folies Berger, just enough was to see the Gantsy. Practically every closeted person there was an expert on how to make his or her buffs the best way.

Racily Big Breakfast Paris also brought us a first break with the famous food and book- fast. Suddenly we understood why the English conquered half the world—they eat more than two merger crossings and any wine they like. Paris gave us our extra day where we (in the case of some more the Eiffel tower) but only out a day off Giverny. People were there to dollop an Acre and drove over shook heads of Hem.

Finally, off one at the Rivier, and like the terms and tickets we went to the Eiffel Tower, the Louvre Museum, and then snapped the Eiffel Tower. But in a way of course, and they had to climb an Acre and drive over shook heads of Hem.

Senior Spent Summer Working for Mission

Diana Prater, Wooster senior, spent the summer working at the Buck Bay Mission in Biloxi, Mississippi, with one of the underlying purposes of the Mission being to better the racial situation in that what they termed "the unworthy of the world" neighborhoods of Biloxi. What has been the racial prejudice is concerned.

We the Mission, consisted of the local unit of the Bethel Mission group of Churches, sponsored a Community Center where we were responsible for the daily living in the church and their children. The program served among other things worked with the children, and other agencies with such activities as crafts, recreation, swimming and sewing shop.

One of the main incidents of the summer was the "bake-a-thon," seventy-five Negroes and three white, consisting of the director of the mission, the minister, and George Wright, Yo Wooster graduate, demonstrated on the beach and were invited.

No-touching ceremonies, normally held in public for the day, during which the children were given the uncashed in the church. We spent three days in July, 1963, and we were left.

Case on Appeal

The case has not been settled, and the action is still pending in the circuit court. The penalty could be death by 28 days in jail and 1000 feet.

In the actual demonstration, which took place in Soweto, the demonstrations were arranged to different city and played until the police took them from the private owners of the demonstration. The police asked them to move, yet seconds later arrived the demonstration, and an action of the tire group into a moving car as little as they could.

The same day, by coincidence, determined the civil rights institute, which is segregated this year of all other Southern churches.

During the service two people left one more driven because the Negroes of the possession. An usher called "We lost two but joined three."

After that day, the Bible school formed itself into a third and the attendance is now in the almost in half.

The police and all the other groups were asked that the announcement is like this is indicative of the problem and the church out of its own responsibility. Although no

Eagles End 33-Year Drought
Scot Offense Racks Up 281 Yards in Defeat

A fired-up squad of Ashland Eagles with an alert defensive unit closed in on the visiting Fighting Scots last Saturday to end a 33-year drought. Not since 1985 when the Eagles won by a 6-0 tally has an Ashland team upset Wooster.

It was simply a matter of being nervous—nervous tickets were sold out by the time the first whistle blew. By the time the white team had cleared the field, the Scots were already 10-7 up. Coach Phil Ship be-lieved the team was starting more towards a two-platoon system. The offense was more likely to use a combination of means to make up for the loss of some more proven players to spell the "true men." The coaches were pleased with the offensive backfield which gained 211 yards—more than last year's squad was able to muster for the seventh game of last year. They are a potentially

Many of the students in this campus have a long-held commitment on which they must make good or else. athletic opportunities are all outside of gym activities and girls' club competitions. But in that it affords some small relief.

The more recreations open the options we have to make WRA teams. For this they are to be commended. One again, though I wonder, for the other day I heard a center on the hockey team say that between homework, I.S. and TUB time she really didn't think she could swing it on the field this year. Choices are this girl, along with most of her companions, male and female, will shoot the book in the back, or even worse in the den in ignorance of the fact that she could not and perhaps not at all for her life.

Something must be said for those individuals who don't or for some reason won't go to those other classes and seek a clay day to it. In essence this record is for one. There are on contingencies the retribution of the summer vacation period, the next choice, you're included in the universal set, but how about the lower sports. Part of your education at the old school is the art of practicing, for some reason in the warm weather, winnicking, and ball games. Dollars to donuts most of your mindless acts are done without knowing it even if you were there. There is no exposure for cutting an athletic content held on a Saturday in your school activity. Even those ARLC for the Lif, available for one, will take your year.

Apartheid

by Bob Shelly

Father: I never thought I'd raise a daughter who would turn against her own father so completely. I told her a hundred times, "Marriage is one of your own kind.

But me, she couldn't listen. I'm a man of my own. She's1 liberal-minded for God's sake. She says to me, 'Daddy, you just aren't open-minded.

Open-minded, hell, I'm as open-minded as the next one. Well, help me, if she marries him she'll never set foot in my home with him, never!

Dispastison Friend: Actually I think you're getting yourself too upset. Try to look at the brighter side. If they really love each other then maybe they can make a go of it. It doesn't really matter what other people think.

Apartheid: The thing is, how is he ever going to find a job to keep her the way she wants to? They'll probably live in some run-down apartment in the ghetto. Even if they do live in a decent neighborhood what will the neighbors think of her husband? And if she can't do it, why can't she think of the children. What if they turn out—you know—like him. It would be tough on them and it would be tough on her.

Dispastison Friend: Well, I'm sure you've thought of all those things, and I'm sure you've also thought of things you haven't told me. After all, she's old enough now—

Father: Old enough? She's just sixteen—
