Dear Folks:

Well, the long, dirty trip from Shasboug is over at last. And I really mean dirty, as I glance at my dirty fingers and fingernails. I'm waiting now for a car from Ingolstadt to come and pick me up. It is an eager anticipation to get back to my nice room, a bath, the Pantes tonight and above, the many letters that must be waiting, the combined treasures of the last 12 days.

What I will now tell you might be a little hard to take. Up to now I haven't mentioned it because I was not sure if the deal would click, but just now as I telephoned Ingolstadt I learned that the orders had already come thru, and Brady is gone already. To be
