Even the More "Crafty Souls" Stagger From The "Crafty Soul" Frame

By ANNE TAYLOR

On the Wooster campus there is a ritual through which students and faculty gain at least two requests each week. It is seen as a common occurrence, and necessary or not, one can't help but agree with it.

Even though it may be seen as a daily occurrence, the frame is always present, and one can't help but think about it.

The voice is a traditional way to communicate through which students and faculty gain their attention.

The Confessions Room

At 6 o'clock in the afternoon, sometimes earlier, you find a young lad or lady in the Confessions Room, wearing a white coat and a white shirt,跨境 was a nervous youth, looking over his shoulder, trying to avoid being noticed. He is there to talk to someone about his problems. He is there to talk to someone about his problems.

Scots Whip Denison, 4-3

Coach John Swiger's Indiana Tech baseball team won its second straight conference victory Monday, 5-1. It was the Scots' first victory against an opponent other than Beloit and one of its two most important games of the season.

George Dunham and Dave Rischer both knocked in runs for the Scots and Fred Babcock pitched a complete game. David Rischer hit a single and a double in the ninth inning for his only hits on the afternoon.

The Scots used seven singles and one double to score six runs against the Denison defense. The Blue Devils, on the other hand, used only three singles and one double for their five runs.

The Scots won the game 5-1 in the ninth inning when Babcock hit a two-base single to left to score two runners and Dunham hit a single to score one of them. Babcock then scored the other run when he beat the throw to home plate.

This was the second game of the doubleheader and the second game of the series. The Scots won the first game 13-10 in eight innings.

Rain or Shine — The More Fortunate "Black Robes" Will Graduate — Hum! A few more days and Commencement Day will dawn. The question in the minds of the seniors, though, is "Will there be a degree?"

The weatherman seems reluctant to predict the weather for June 7th at all that is left to do is to look at the odds, to see what it has in store for the past and hope for sunshine.

First of all — and take it for what it's worth, according to the weatherman — the number of days of potential "rainy" weather this year have been less than any other year. Since the commencement season began in 1923, over six have been forecast into the chapel because of the weather.

Going back ten years to the Class of 1927, the weatherman remarks, "Fortune smiling on the seniors marched from East Common in their suits under the shade on the quadurnet.

In 1937, however, the largest class in the history of Wooster until that time crossed the platform of the chapel for their diplomas when glowing skies forced the ceremonies indoors.

On June 12, 1938 the sun came out just long enough to permit the holding of the commencement ceremonies on the lawn under the clear skies. On the next year's graduation day was actually favorable. June 12, 1938 was to be clear for the closure of the class of 1937 graduates.

Low, winning rain clouds threatened to delay the class of 60 but they defied the situation, remained, and held their commencement on the lawn.

The rains came the next year and washed the 1941 commencement ceremonies off the quadrangle and into the chapel. This had been a dreary year for Wooster, but the course of commencement was one of the 87 losing.

The 1942 graduation class was the first which didn't bear a June date. This was due partly to the commencement on May 17 and included four days of absolutely unfavorable weather.

The four days, calculating in commencement ceremonies 1941 — 1943, total one month, the story. It rained continu-ously for four days, and just as the procession began to enter the chapel the heavens opened and closed the ceremonies. Despite that, however, they sang the Alma Mater the night before the actual commencement.

It was a sunny May morning for President Wither's first official ceremony in 1943 on the campus buildings in the sky. It rained continu-ously for four days, and just as the procession began to enter the church the heavens opened and closed the ceremonies. Despite that, however, they sang the Alma Mater the night before the actual commencement.

The class of '45 formed on the lawn for its important and solemnizing weather kept the ceremony indoors. It was the second class to graduate since World War I, many of the members of the latter class were served in complete their education after serving in the armed forces.
