SENEATORS MEET ON QUAD
In a brief Student Senate meeting held under the tents on the Quad, delegates were asked to sign a petition urging the Senate to adopt a bicameral system.

The discussion centered around the concept of a bicameral Senate and the potential benefits of such a system. The delegates expressed varying opinions on the matter, with some favoring a bicameral system due to the increased representation it would provide, while others were hesitant to support it, citing concerns about potential complications and increased bureaucracy.

The meeting concluded with a vote on the petition, which was passed with a majority of delegates in favor of adopting a bicameral system. The delegates agreed to continue discussing the matter and to explore further considerations for a potential bicameral Senate in future meetings.

The purpose of the meeting was to engage students in a democratic process and to encourage participation in the decision-making process for the college's governance. The delegates recognized the importance of student input and committed to working towards a more inclusive and representative system.

In a well-attended, bi-cameral system, the McKinley Republican convention carried on. The rights of the people from the Senate. The2,000 delegates, being the largest body in the convention, made the final decision. The convention was conducted in the presence of the delegates, who were seated in the homes of the members.

Archie Johnston Descended From Knighted Stock: Is Top Family Man and Sociology Professor

By Corly Marker

"Around the corner" of the sociology classroom, a robust gentleman paused as he was about to enter his office. "I'm Archie Johnston," he smiled at the man with the good-natured smile that graced his face. Upon approaching the desk, the professor and, reluctantly developed a discussion about the various roles played by sociology in society, from a historical perspective to its contemporary applications.

Professor Johnston is a new Woman's College professor. He received his degree from Yale University, which he has attended for the last two years. In his spare time, he enjoys reading and playing the piano. He is married to the former Evelyn Hawthorne, who is a music teacher at the college.

Johnston's research focuses on the sociology of education, with particular interest in the role of technology in the classroom. He is currently working on a project that examines the impact of digital tools on student engagement.

The professor's interests also extend beyond academia, as he is an avid traveler and enjoys exploring different cultures around the world. His passion for travel is reflected in his teaching, where he incorporates examples from diverse countries into his lectures. He is widely respected for his ability to connect with students and make complex concepts accessible.

In addition to his teaching responsibilities, Johnston is actively involved in the college community, serving on several committees and participating in various campus events. His dedication to his work and his commitment to students have earned him high praise from colleagues and students alike.

In conclusion, Archie Johnston is not only a distinguished scholar but also a passionate educator and an active member of the college community. His contributions to the field of sociology continue to enrich the lives of students and faculty alike, making him a valuable asset to Woman's College and the wider academic community.
