Dr. William Schreiber suggested expanding the German Department's Vienna Summer School program in areas of history, music, art, and interdepartmental studies to a report to the open faculty meeting Monday. Faculty and students heard report of the freshman class, the College Inadequacy and a short discussion of the SCOT's Key statement on demonstrations.

Paternalism Questioned in Campus Conference

Editor's Note: Opinions, proposals, and suggestions drafted at the Campus Conference, held here Sept. 3 until 5, total 31 pages of typed text dealing with all aspects of the College. In a three part series starting today, VOICE will summarize this full-length statement, to be available in its entirety in the President's office October 1. Two topics of discussion fell into three major groupings, each to be presented separately - the College as an institution; life of the College; and academic life of the College.

PART ONE - SOCIAL LIFE OF THE COLLEGE

Out-of-classroom issues discussed among students, faculty, trustees, and administration at the Campus Conference centered around the College's articulation of the concern for the total life of the student. A private college has not only a right but a responsibility to set goals and standards in all areas of student life. (From In Perspective, The ScoC's Key, 1968-69, p. 4)

Interpretations of this statement by the small discussion groups ranged from simply "paternalism," to "stifling," to the opposite reaction that "such concern has been and should continue to be manifested in a positive way."

A feeling of over-protectiveness was felt by one entire group, which agreed unanimously that "institutional paternalism has inhibited the development of mature student responsibility at the College of Wooster." And a second group agreed that the College "has set up a controlled environment, which for a large number of students, is stifling."

Our response to this is the establishment of a series of independent committees to make judgments and recommendations in all areas of educational policy. There will be eight of these committees, each chaired by a member of the Educational Affairs Committee. They will have only two obligations: to arrive at some sort of recommendation in that area even if it is not to change, and to be open to the suggestion of participation of all interested students.

Monday, each student will be given an application form for work on these committees. The committees will work on a year round basis, and the amount of work each will take up is to be decided by the individuals involved. We hope that all students will either be members of these committees, or at least have opinions known to the members. Only then, will we be able to represent student opinion on the EAC, and if we cannot do that, we shouldn't be there.

The first five committees will deal with the curriculum reforms now under consideration, and will report directly to the EPC. The others will be concerned with other areas of educational policy, and will report to the SGA, to the person concerned, or to groups (Continued on Page 3)

EPC Encourages Revamping; Seeks Student Participants

by Dick Vedra

Trevor Sharp’s speech last Monday presented the outline of an idea in revising the social climate on campus. Through student participation on the Campus Council, we will have a major voice in the decisions concerning drinking, social rules, and regulations of activities at Wooster. But more basic changes are being called for, changes in types of courses offered, the requirements for graduation, the calendar used on campus, the grading system, and perhaps even the organizational structure of the college.

The new administration has decided that now we must completely update the curriculum of the college, a task that has not been done since the addition of I.S. in the mid-1960’s. The newly created Educational Policy Committee, the group which will make recommendations for changes, has decided that it will be time students were given a formal voice in their own education: last Monday afternoon, two students, Donna Eise and myself, began meeting as ‘participating members with the EPC.”

Thus the blu of a long series of student governments has been called. We have complained of injustice for years. Now we can give an opportunity to participate fairly, an opportunity to demand what we feel we want, and to go about getting it.

The SGA’s Educational Affairs Committee believes that we must actively seek out student ideas if this experiment is to work. We must end elitist student government at Wooster, with its philosophy that only the "dread" student and are consulted. Especially in something as important as the academic system of the college, all students should be given a voice and a chance for participation in the revision process.

The SKY IS GRAY...

A press service photo of this summer's French H-bomb test in the South Pacific carried a descriptive caption indicating the smoke as "8,000 times thicker than fog." Even the phenomenon of our age will, apparently, "blow up" in a traditional or predictable way.

The non-classical cloud hanging over many colleges at this time—billed as "a student demonstration"—is rapidly increasing our classroom freedom and the sluggish progress toward student social responsibility.

The conflict is depicted as a social tug-of-war between the.flexes of unrestrained personal anarchy on the student side and the forces of in loco parentis and totalitarianism backing the administration. This battle is waged not by a student against a bureaucracy, perhaps subconsciously, in student governments and by increasing administrative emphasis on counseling.

The relevant question for Wooster remains, whether the College's approach to the full student is really in line with its approach to the exercise of social freedoms by its student body.

As Richard Poirier, Professor of English, Rutgers, asks in his article, "The War Against the Young" in the coming October issue of THE ATLANTIC, "Is it youth or is it the economic and sexual desires of adult parents being served by what Erik Erikson calls the 'moralism'...the period when people under twenty-one are 'allergic' to discover their identities without at the same time having to assume adult responsibilities?" I don't feel Woost students, under or over twenty-one, are served by such a period, while such a period is not an experience here.

The curricular introduction of, and student initiative in 399 courses, and Cultural Area, Inland and Urban Areas Departments are an encouraging sign of willingness to revise.

The review and restructuring of THE WORKS, now called THE SOVEREIGN, is a significant student consultation and reviewed response broadening and changing counseling as an administrative responsibility, and the introduction of the new area of concern appears as both constructive criticism in the direction of revision. But, as is all too often true, the areas of excellence continue to progress faster than the areas in greater need of improvement.

...AND CLOUDY

Questions have arisen more than once this week concerning the addition to the section on Standards of Conduct of the KEY concern- ing "perspective." As Dr. Hirsch's Dissent, page 3, suggests, it is one of the more justifiable and relevant pronouncements. The idea seems irrevocable to the student and single mindedness of the College, but it is noted that the Dissent appeared two days before the March on Washington delegates of last year; demonstrations do exist.

But two sentences of the statement in particular are unjustifiable, vague and questionable. The sentence which reads "The College will not tolerate infringement of the right of movement, assembly, and free discussion of any matter, whether public or not, and simply must be a factor in each individual's moral decision." This leads to the second problem. The quality of consequence is not at all clear. The last sentence of the statement reads:

"When the action of a student or group of students is judged by designated College officials as disruptive of the normal operation of the of the (sic) College, such officials are authorized to act immediately without recourse to further procedures."

It could be argued that "designated officials" means deans but in a more biblical perspective of the КЕу, trustees, administrators and faculty are spoken of as "designated and responsible bodie" with the "authority and obligation to determine the nature and character of the moral decision." The campus police and dormitory residents are an extension of the office of the deans, what kind of authority would they have in carrying out such an enforcement?

It is not clear how defined is the role of the city policeman, pressured by a conservative community not to let things get out of hand, in the instance of a campus oriented demonstration in the current civic situation.

It could be argued that any action taken under the emotional tension of a demonstration would necessarily be reviewed before any final decision of action can be made, but this is not stated.

The 1968 Higher Education Bill presently under consideration by Congress would reserve to the college the right of withdrawing Government funded student aid if the college can demonstrate a state of open conflict with their students participating in riots. (See article on this hill page 1.) Nearly 20 percent of the Wooster student body could be affected by this decision.

A statement of penalties range is necessary. The argument that there is a student "right of protest" and the right of "peaceful action" statement than for those concerning alcohol, gambling or sexual conduct.

The last paragraph of this statement should therefore be re-written to clarify who is meant by designated officials, to assure immediate review of any demonstration scene action by those officials, and the mis-perspective range of penalties might cloud.

Letters to the Editor

A CANDY BAR TO THE BAR

I have for a long time held the personal belief that education implies this learning to use wisely both the freedoms and responsibilities offered here. It has certainly been a many ways of learning, from books to physical labor, and doubt if any one way can teach everything.

Since I came here three years ago, some people have decided that the traditional concerns with sections, girls' clubs and trips to the Shark or Florida were not the concerns this led you to protest, and that they wanted more than one kind of learning. But this created some discussion with a more ever self-evaluative element of our community.

Most recently this conservative view has been expressed in the Advisory Council's President of Ernest Brudalsh, who held that: liberal education is a beautiful communal experience which it is— in the future—to take only on campus, especially within the walls of the Lowery Center, as a continuous process. Such a statement is objectionable only in that it places the bar for learning the use of freedom or responsibility.

Thus we have a choice: are the walls of the university to be used to limit our understanding of society, culture, and liberal education, or are those walls to be the limit of our understanding of society, culture, and liberal education? Can we not think of our own society in the light of other species, of the family of many kinds of real learning? If we have decided to have liberal education, then neither unions nor conservative administrations will stop us.

A faculty friend suggested that the building is a candy bar, used by frustrated parents to quell a noisy child. Whether or not it is true that Galpin has deliberately thrown it as a monstrosity, green chocolate bar is not my concern. I ask what choice the student body will make, now that we can pre-occupy ourselves with luxury. Do we want our education, or do we want chocolate?

The ABSENCE OF BEER

To the Editor:

With most everybody now caught up in the initial frenzy of a new year, hopefully we students would deliberately pass to establish a few scenes such more pleasant to the College of Wooster. Hopefully, the difficult demands and problems of the latter 20th century, and the very substantial resources, both of time and money, being in- vested in our education, will in- volve some greatest simplicity, without any future event or negligence of one's draft notice.

This won't come easy, but I think your friend has athlete's mouth.

In a minor format change, the Sec's Key has separated the section of key pronouncements from the calendar section. This is a mistake. "Various forms of counseling available" for standard violators.

Federal CARE

Oh yes, the Campus Conference. Held early in September, last year.

Communication? Oh, sure. Even had the trustees there, along with faculty, administration and some students. Lots of "open house meetings" were held between and out for their own personal enjoyment. Sure. Even saw he'd to the directions and dimensions in which the College could grow because of these ideas. Oh no, there's no greater perception of Negroes here now. Yes, I.S. is still the same. That's a good program; been here for years.

The Campus Council idea got off the ground. It managed to change a couple of social rules. Sections are permitted two conf events off-campus each year now. You know, that kind of thing.

And on, and on, and on...

Why not? There's been talk about before review and revision of social and academic standards at the College. And implementation of these changes, many, many, been logged down in procedural details and discussion.

But Wooster's recent Campus Conference is significantly different from previous attempts at reform. But my, it's been a lot of work, the new program, no college's code of conduct. Most important, the suggestions and proposals that finally emerged this week from the Conference were discussed and articulated jointly by students, faculty and administration. It's as if the College's students carried out the task more meaningfully, their concerns. These students can form "cabinet" meetings in many instances and when not, at least defmiting the desired frame- work in which the College ought to operate.

So a lot of doors were opened. But if a foot doesn't get stuck in somewhere, the doors may slam in our faces.

Immediate implementation of the President's Council recommendations (see page 3) is a necessary door-step and would be a significant first step to making important one spectator a reality. Here the conference started at the very heart of the College, the minds of the faculty of the College will continue to grow. And the Council can become the most important instrument for change in the master statements, at least in the College's life. Yet how?

If the new atmosphere of optimism, supposedly generated by the Conference and articulated by the speaking last year, Thomas in Chapel on Tuesday, is more to be just a little worn out, the glow, the Conference statement must get immediate attention from all the sectors involved in their making. Not in the fall or next semester, but this week.

Certainly talk most continue. But if it ends with a file drawer made fatter by some dead suggestions, Wooster must chalk-up the Conference as another misadventure in education.

Ruisard Questions Tactics of Radicalism

After Chicago, Gassing and Billy Clubs

Chicago has begun to return to normal after the excitement of the Convention. Hippie-delegates, and national guardsmen cleared the streets, hotels, and parks; litter-free-ness is respected in the headlines and the police have gone back to writing traffic tickets.

Many of us who were involved in the demonstration this week are becoming increasingly disturbed by the droppings of word bombs that have been thrown by the clean-up Majority Daley and the phib-illy-ness of our efforts will not be washed away. We are writing letters to the people we know in order to share our personal experiences with them in the hope that they can make a more reasonable evaluation of the extra-conven- tional activities that took place out- side of the amphibian theater.

Personal View

I will be the first to admit that my last remnants of objectivity disappeared during the appearance of the blue wall—just as the white-armyed wall of 1905 had done by the bodies of the delegates in the streets; that my nerves had been continually ignored. When the Wisconsin delegates began to march to its center, it was turned back "peace- fully" without threats of violence and arrests.

Barred Wire Snow Plow

Later, however, a second march failed to get permission from all over the US was also asked to turn back. This time the police were less recognizable in their arrests. When the delegates were dispersed, the police closed their ranks and ordered the 2,000 marchers to "dispersse," a word the marchers also refused, kept with barbed-wire "snow- shovel" were headed by the front as the canisters of tear gas exploded, demonstration throns was about to approach. Surprising enough, few got away, and I am not sure how many of you have even noticed—those that have been re- mained so far, it is difficult. I am the urge to run. That night the police had to have a heavy that the front from the marchers to bar- ry legs and many others.

Crowd Panic

Roes of rope-tied joined arms- men marched to keep from running and a guide who next with fewer people for as a means of feeling not quite so alone and helpless. After six blocks of walking ahead of the troops, another line of barbed wire appeared in front of the demonstrators and began to separate from both directions. (One girl was hit in the face with a canister and was permanently blinded.) Only at that point did the crowd begin to panic. The soldiers in the wrong direction were falsely stabbed or heard by the soap. I saw three people between a wall and the barbed wire—the soap did not allow them to get out. I saw one person with a rock in his hand and he passed out front, and I could throw it.

After the march, mass activity was temporarily halted by the ar- rival of the remaining delegates of the management. (The com- parison between the two well-fed, eager, and well-organized delegations returning to their hotels for a few nightcaps and the dusty, sore- footed demonstrators whose faces were red and swollen from tear- gas was unforgettable.) Through- out the night, people in various conditions went through our first of center and shared individual en- counters with the police. (Many of you know Brian Dumby—the new seven streets in his head.)

Glass or Paper?

Apparently, the police were also concerned about the "rubble round- ing" in our storefront first aid cen- ter that was posted outside to keep anyone but medics and injured from going in. Two hours later, the police railed the 15th floor of the McCarthy headquarters, saying that our staff mem- bers had been throwing coke bottles and beer cans out the win- dow. (Incidents—marchers were dispelled hand paper cups and the police was now at the end of the windows, we are not bad, but not arrested.)

I can't explain the emotions or the impact of a presidential nominat- ing convention that radicalized the logic of the police to the point (where the left wing) and the "right wing" are almost in- distinguishable in tactics, if not beliefs. Could go on a few more things I haven't even wanted to hear about, but I really have only one other thing to say. Ut- most you are willing to see your- selves, your friends, and your com- panions go through what many have in the past week, keep your minds open to new ideas and do not discard at the end of something. Each person who keeps from yelling "dirty com- mittee" at every kid with long hair, and each kid who keeps from yelling "dirty pig" at every soldier of the end of something, should save one pint of blood from someone else at the end of the movement. I am sure to try in many instances, but think first about whether it's worth it. We all have the right to rise our own skills for a cause, but none of us has the right to force someone else to have to risk his.

Barbara Ruisard
Class of '68

DO THEY KNOW? As these workers climb ladders to repair the Chapel, candles in Galap show that in a few months the building will be raised to the fate of Hoover Cottage. Architect for the new chapel, Victor Christen-Jones, visited the campus last week and plans to return in November to gain more impressions from the college community of what is needed for the new building.

PERSONAL STATEMENT

Paternalism Questioned

In response to this College atti- tude, often labelled the "In loco pa- rentis" syndrome of the Colleges were voted suggesting student self-determination of social relations.

"The development of regulations on student social life, and their enforcement, should be the total responsibility of the students themselves."

"We believe that if rules are to be respected," the same state- ment continued, "the students must respect the concensus of the great majority of the people to whom they apply.

A third group suggested there- was review and review of rules on non-academic matters by the students, with the added under- standing that any such reviews are undertaken in the context of the students' councils. Establishment of a Campus Council, or Community Council, was recommended, the best method for regulating life "beyond the classroom."
The "91" to which Director of Athletics Bob Bruce was referring is the new Physical Education Center that was for five long years under the sands and is now on the campus—or at least half of it is.

The present structure has been termed Phase I. This winter it will house the basketball and wrestling teams. The section which is still on the drawing board, has been termed, logically enough, Phase II. This part will contain a new swimming pool, a multi-purpose gymnasium, and an outdoor court, staff offices and classrooms.

When asked when the second half would be completed, or even started, Director of Development William Nye answered, "I haven't seen the slightest breath of expenditure of funds, although we have the money. The working drawings are all done, as are the excavations and the plumbing."

Neely said that about $1,500,000 is needed for construction to begin on Phase II, while the debt incurred in the building of Phase I is approximately $237,000.

Fred's from a stunning performance at the University of Virginia last Saturday, the nationally noted "clinging hoe" Scott team goes against Grove City College in the home opener tomorrow at 11 a.m. New blanchers, which will see around 600, for the game, will be up.

Wooster coach Bob Nye doesn't know too much about Grove City except that it is an aggressive, hard-hitting team. In his estimation, it is an outstanding independent team which compiled a 6-4 record last season in one of its poorer years. "We hope to win," Nye said, "because we're the bet-ter team. How much better, I don't know."

The Scott boosters proved the worthiness of their national ranking last week when they tied the larger school, 1-1, in Morgantown, W.Va. The university has averaged five goals a game the last years and has All-American Wally Nistorenko on its squad. Scott's defender was, in coach Nye's words, "almost perfect" as he held the high scoring West Virginians scoreless for 25 minutes.

Standing on defense for the Scotts was halfback Pierre Radju whose job it was to cover Nistorenko. Radju held him in check with the short of any of which found their mark. Pat Collier, the halfback, and Bob Wilsie also of the Scotts and Martin also helped form the impregnable Scott defense. Goalie Ted Caldwell was credited with eight saves and was seen breaking up several Scott attacks all afternoon.

The two teams fought to a scoreless tie in the first half, but with 45:30 gone in the third period, the Wooster offense came to life with the tie-breaker. Senior left wing Stu Miller crossed the ball in from the left corner across the West Viginia goal and junior center for-ward Chuck Noah slotted it in for the score.

The defenses continued their vigilance until 2:10 left in the game, when the West Virginia left wing took a pass from his right wing and broke through. Scott and kicked the ball into the net. No scoring occurred in the two five-minute overtime periods.

Coach Nye said the officials re-marked the line before the overtime. Coach Nye said the officials re-mar ked the line before the overtime. Scott ter played the better game funda-mentally and made a fine showing against the big university. Psycholo-gically, the situation was not in favor as 6-5 in Grove City.

The Scotts, it is to note, will be the aggressor in this game, to gain in the ball. The Scott offense is composed of five players and the defense is composed of six players. The three backs and three ends, and the Scott defense is composed of nine players and the offense is composed of seven players. The Scotts have a strong running back in their line and the defense is composed of three players and the offense is composed of seven players. It will be a battle between the two teams.

The Scotts, it is to note, will be the aggressor in this game, to gain in the ball. The Scott offense is composed of five players and the defense is composed of six players. The three backs and three ends, and the Scott defense is composed of nine players and the offense is composed of seven players. The Scotts have a strong running back in their line and the defense is composed of three players and the offense is composed of seven players. It will be a battle between the two teams.

The denial of all scholarship funds seems unfair to many who have noted that while students suspended from school rarely are barred for longer than one year, those denied federal funds are not eligible to re-apply for three years.

Offers of the National Student Association are planning possible legal tests should the provision be adopted and other strategy.

An official of the American Association of University Professors

(AAUP) called such provisions

"unfair" and noted the "added complexity" in administering federal assistance.

Herman Orenstifcher, AAUP's

staff counsel, also said the provision could "be a school's hands"

in dealing with students. "A university wanting to take some action might not take any against protests because the penalty is too severe since the law seems to insist on withdrawing aid from students judged to violate its standards," he said.

A spokesman for the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges reacted

by issuing an earlier statement saying "threats of fiscal sanctions will not contribute to campus stability but will more likely encourage diversity of the protest

we want to end."

U.S. Office of Education officials were asked when the final

Congress report is ready. Commissioner Harold Howe

II has said he opposes such interference with campus affairs because they constitute a "threat to academic freedom."

The compromise provision would deny federal financial assistance to students or employees who are "convicted of a crime involving force, disruption, or interference of school property or who violate a university rule if the insitution judged the offense to be serious and substantially disruptive."

Regatta Trophy
The Soot Sailing Club returned this week from the Cape Race Regatta with a third place trophy. Skippers Mike Brayton and Mike Byun placed behind the University of Michigan and Notre Dame. Crossing for them in the race on Lake Michigan were Laura Jordan, Vern Zwolfer and Bill Calvin.

Gilligan Fever
Tuesday evening, an enthusiastic group of 150 students and faculty met to kick-off the Jack Gilligan for U.S. Senate campaign on the Wooster campus. "Against All Odds," a 30-minute documentary, was shown followed by brief explanations of the Wayne County campaign and the ensuing campaign by the Wooster Students for Gilligan.

Produced for the successful Democratic primary campaign against Frank Lausche, "Against All Odds" portrays Gilligan as a striking similarity to the Kennedy. He is young (47), athletic, Irish Catholic descent, and has compiled an impressive record as a Councilman and a member of the U.S. House of Representatives. Apparently Charles Gugenheim had this in mind as he dealt with Gilligan’s war record, his football career at Notre Dame, and Gilligan’s own remarks to the effect that he probably made it into City Council the first time on his family’s name.

Gilligan’s position on major issues such as the war, pollution, race, education and the urban crisis were woven in through dialogue with citizens of all ages, and narration.

Clayton Ellsworth Jr., Chairman of the Wayne County Citizens for Gilligan Committee, reviewed their efforts up-to-date. Their group draws from a wide base of support including Independents and Republicans. The leadership is drawn from the total community: unions, businesses, the agricultural situation, and the College. "This is the first time in my knowledge," remarks Ellsworth, "that such a homogeneous group has been put together." This appears to be a strong on-going base for future expression of issues and candidates in the community.

The Students for Gilligan group will play a substantial role in canvassing and polling voters. Juliayn Walker, Bill Spreng and Alan Unger asked students to sign up for these and other dimensions of the campaign, such as press and public relations work, a secretarial staff, a group to plan social and fund raising functions, and an advertising and poster committee. In addition, students volunteered to man an information and sign-up table in the Lower Center.

Hits Campus Campaigners
The Wooster campus has had an influx of students with changing college social rules may attract excessive attention. While the campus social context definitely bears on one’s college education, few will consider the absence or presence of beer in Lower Center as crucial to his learning to deal with the momentous questions of the day.

Let us resolve now, at the beginning of the year to use most effectually the resources at our disposal for ultimate contribution not only to the Wooster community but to the human community.

DICK HORN

HUMAN UNION
To the Editor:
If Lower Center is to be "The Human Union" suggested in the editorial last week, it must allow for spontaneity. The rigid scheduling of all meeting rooms and small lounges will interfere with informal gatherings. There should be at least one small lounge which could not be reserved by any one group at any time. If the proposed coffee house is to be a success, it also should be left open.
