College plans to relocate Overholt House

Historic house to be moved for the third time with outside help

Oscar Bautista
Contributing Writer

College of Wooster is hoping that the move to relocate Overholt House:

“The College recognizes that it isn’t just a house that has the designations for being an old home, but that it is a historic residence in Wooster; there isn’t any other place that has the style of residence for the Wooster Clinic. Now, the College and the Wayne County Historical Society are in the process of finding a third party to possibly relocate it a third time or donate components of the interior.

“The College decided a bit more than a year ago that we no longer had a programmatic need for the Overholt House and we moved the Office of Inter-faith Campus Ministry to the former site of a summer camp in the summer of 2015,” said John Hopkins, associate vice president for development, facilities and marketing.

On Monday, Aug. 8, 2016, the Request for Information (RFI), detailing the rules and guidelines for third party bidders, is posted online and a statement is made to students, faculty, and staff.

Today [Sept. 12, 2016] is the end of the 30-day period, so we hope to receive a few responses and Dialog LaRotta, associate vice president for facilities management and development at the College, “We have had at best a dozen interested parties, but it is difficult to know if they are truly interested and have the ability to repurpose the house, until we see their proposal.”

The RFI to the community sets a list of questions for the interested parties and the third party will plan for the removal and reinstallation of Overholt, how the party will pay for the move and how the party will manage the site.

“In the past, it has been a problem with outside help because it isn’t just a house that has the future. It is the first time that we have had to relocate the house. We are looking for a third party to be interested and to actually plan to repurpose the house,” said LaRotta.

Up until Monday, Sept. 26, the College will be evaluating the RFI and will finalize the party that will be responsible for relocating the historic house.
Complaints received about vagina in Lowr Center

An art installation by the campus group (k)urry depicting female genitalia has once again garnered a complaint on The College of Wooster Campus.

For their week-long series of sex positive and sex education events known as Sex Week, (k)urry members painted a schedule of events and images on the windows of Lowr Center. One of those images, painted by Vy Va’ih,” was an anatomically labeled drawing of a vulva with wings.

This semester, a student told Campus Safety that there was a vulva, without a uterus, drawn in Tacoma Dining. The same group which prompted (k)urry, a student of a vulva in Gault Schoolhouse找不到 the location of art installations and the purpose, and therefore the organization was not required to remove their work.

However, in the past week, Director of Campus Dining and Conference Services Marjorie Shamp contacted (k)urry and (k)urry was expected to inform her of changes to Lowr Center to better accommodate low-sodium diets, etc., such as the replacement of high-sodium in-gredients with their low-sodium counterparts. When reached for comment, (k)urry recognized the imp ortance of similarity, but still to be made regarding campus dining and its accommodations for special dietary restrictions, special diets, and potentially life-saving improve (ment improvements) in response to student suggestions and needs. For example, Shamp pointed to the change to a healthier brand of peanut butter, a direct response to student suggestions.

More pertinent for students with special dietary restrictions, however, is the hiring of a new sous-chef at Lowr Dining Hall. Shamp said part of the responsibilities for this new position will be helping Campus Dining coordinate more meals with students who have food allergies and conditions that require alternative ingredients.

O’Grady responded to the most recent Campus Dining changes by saying, “I’m excited for the changes. I think that a lot of students will benefit from them. I hope it will shift campus dining towards a more accommodating and sustainable environment.”

Shamp agreed that the ideas need to be updated, and stated that the department is working on updating the information, but that it is a time-intensive process. Lauren Arellano, Director of the Learning Center and Coordinator for all ADA accommodations, said that she cannot comment on individual cases but encouraged students to view the procedures found under Disability Support Services at Wooster.edu.

A plan for the house, the house will be demolished.

O’Grady and Marrow, this information is often times incorrect. Shamp agreed that the ideas need to be updated, and stated that the department is working on updating the information, but that it is a time-intensive process. Lauren Arellano, Director of the Learning Center and Coordinator for all ADA accommodations, said that she cannot comment on individual cases but encouraged students to view the procedures found under Disability Support Services at Wooster.edu.

I hope it will shift campus dining towards a more accommodating and sustainable environment. However, there is still a lot of work to be done.

-Chrissy O’Grady ’17

Said Broehl. “It probably would’ve been easier to just tear it down. Depressing, really.”

If there is a failure to finalize a plan for the house, the house will be demolished.

Al balloons expressed his concern that the end product would not reflect the views of the student body. In the end, he believes the College will continue to improve on its own initiative. The College’s verdict that the panels should be taken down. The College’s verdict that the panels should be taken down.

The Fall academy of Religion lecture series graces Wooster

Daniel Sweat

College welcomes new dean of A.P.E.X., Dr. Jennifer Griffin

Monét Davis

Contributing Writer

The Fall Academy of Religion will be hosting its 50th annual lecture series starting this month. Each session features the Academy of Religion invited visitors and guest speakers who are all experts in their field who lecture on topics related to religion and faith.

Every Wednesday from Sept. 13 to Oct. 18, the academy will host five lectures from 7 to 9 p.m. in Lee Lecture Rooms in Walley Hall presenting this semester’s theme "Religious Fundamentalisms: The Clash of the Worlds, The Clash of the Values."

The term "fundamentalism" was first used in the United States in the 1800's to describe a theology which rejected modern science and attempted to bind science and theology on to scriptural and societal issues as they relate to religion and faith.

Dr. Griffin served as associate provost of the library. There it is, you wander to and fro across the campus before you finally stumble into the lower level of the library. There it is, A.P.E.X. Your hands are shaking in excitement. Your yard sale.

Dan Griffin seems motivated and passionate about her new position. "I sure am ready to experience that's very impressive. But are you, by the way,Jennifer Griffin?" Griffin serves as associate dean of the library. There it is, you wander to and fro across the campus before you finally stumble into the lower level of the library. There it is, A.P.E.X. Jennifer Griffin seems more of a big picture person, I think. Academic hierarchies can be confusing. Don't know how to write a resume? That's fine! Don't know how to write a résumé. The Moral Majority, an organization founded in 1979, is one of the largest religious movements ever to be engaged in public and political activities. The Moral Majority is a political action group that advocates for policies based on traditional Christian values. It was founded by the Rev. Jerry Falwell, who was influenced by the Fundamentalist movement.

The term "fundamentalism" is often used to describe a movement that believes in the literal interpretation of the Bible. Fundamentalism is a political and religious movement that seeks to impose a particular interpretation of the Bible on society. Fundamentalism is often characterized by a rejection of modern science and the belief in the literal interpretation of the Bible.

Fundamentalism is a complex and controversial topic. It is often seen as a threat to academic freedom and to the separation of church and state. However, it is also a topic of great importance to many people. Fundamentalism is a topic that is often discussed in the media and in political circles.

Jennifer Griffin has been a faculty member at Wooster for more than 10 years. During her first few months here, she's become involved in the College and its programs. Griffin says she's excited to see the College grow and to work with students and faculty.

"Excitement, realization and impressed are some of the words that come to mind when I read," Kevante Weakley '18 said. "Let it liistitett, take it in and exhaustion are the emotions I have when I perform."

Anyone would be shocked to hear that the child-rapper known as K.O. (a name he inherited from his father) and Kevin (Kevin describes exhaust as one of the prevalent topics in his frame and craft in plain air. Though I will not understand the mind of these artists I can find that root music is representative of the black communities that day-to-day life, especially in their current state. People typically look at a work of Christian and think of Chance the Rapper, but both forms attempt to evoke emotion at a fundamental level. Student writer Kevante "Mama Hvisi," he said. "Like even right now, I am still waking up early even after every night. Back when I was in school, I would wake up early and go to school early, but now I realize that was never something I really realized until now, and I am grateful for her support and her love." Wrapping up the interview, I asked Kevante what he hopes to give people through his music. "I want people to learn what I learned through negative and positive things, by listening to what you've said," he said.

Listening to his music, one can definitely hear more than just sadness. It also offers hope for getting through difficult times by keeping your head up. Kevante has also released a music video for his song "Don't Sleep." The video itself is about him and his friends. Cloud at theyounggod

New independent film AKRON screened on campus

Lily Iserson
Viewpoints Editor

This Wednesday, The College of Wooster students gathered together for a special screening of AKRON, an independent film directed and written by Briana O'Donnell and co-director Sasha King, who co-produced it. The film, a story about young gay love and the impact of family history, was screened at Freedlander Theatre. Afterwards, members of the college community met with the directors in a special talkback at The Woooster Ion.

Parts of the movie were filmed on the College’s campus — according to Melissa Chesnato, the College’s Director of Sexuality and Gender Inclusion, one of the film’s most pivotal moments was shot at the parking lot of Sycamore Hall. The rest was filmed in the campus’s eponymous city, Akron, O’Donnell’s hometown.

“We consider the environment to be another character in the film,” said O’Donnell. “The end of winter in Ohio, where the snow and ice thaw and the color starts to come back to the sky and the fields — this past winter further enhanced the themes of the film — it being set in Akron really rooted the whole project at every step.”

A Kickstarter campaign culminated financial support for O’Donnell and King’s project, which 105 backers funded the project in a total sum of $30,186. On the film and how his family experienced in inspired his writing, O’Donnell wrote on Kickstarter:

“My parents recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary and my five siblings and I celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary and my five siblings and I were all together within the same time frame. The film’s themes of family and family history — the ‘story of the same people’ — became the key component of the story.

The closing track “Home of the Brave” is arguably the most straightforward song on the album due to its overall message of what people are willing to do in order to hold fast onto the American dream. Overall, the album features a story that not many other artists have delved into and is fraught with songs that could seamlessly blend into a contemporary playlist featuring Vampire Weekend, Two Door Cinema Club and Cage the Elephant.

Young the Giant, before viewing the film, was enthusiastic about the movie, set near her hometown of Mayfield Heights, Ohio. In the presence for the Queer Student Union. “I’m sure AKRON will connect with me on a personal level, and that’s something you don’t get very often with in the tropes that commonly follow queer films. It will be nice to have a representation of what being queer is without showing the negatives of what may or may not come from such iden- tity,” said Malzke.

"I don’t think that would be a competitive and maybe beat the season would be a great opportunity to show the world that we’re at the top of our game and we’re still working hard to keep us in the mix."

Two days after Lochte spoke with reporters about an incident he described as robbery, he was drawn his gun, no robbery had "It's traumatic for me. I'm 1.5 of which came from Aaron time when I think people will think it is safe to say that this statement from Lochte truly sums up just how immature he is and how inexperienced he is of currently being called an Olympian.

Nearly a month after the incident, Lochte’s punishment has been announced. A month suspension from domestic and international competitions has been enacted on the Olympian. The ban will prevent Lochte from swimming in the 2016 World Championships in Budapest. In addition, Lochte will lose his $1 million contract for Dancing With the Stars. A 20-hour community service requirement has also been added to the swimmer’s "heavy load" as well.

While Lochte has not been stripped of his Olympic medals for the incident, the loss of the stipend and domestic community service hours seems like a gentle slap on the wrist for someone who is supposed to be an exemplary athlete and role model for young athletes around the globe. If we hold our athletes to a higher standard than we do our politicians, what does this say about our public integrity as a nation? Where do our priorities lie? While Lochte’s light punishment say it is safe to say that both 2016 and Brazil’s feel that this statement is lacking in substance and Lochte has a lot of work – and apologizing and truth-telling – ahead of him before he can hope to return to the level of respect he enjoyed in Brazil.

Megan Zerrer, a Sports Editor for the College Voice, spoke with reporters about an incident he described as robbery. But if you don’t have a weapon," he explained. "I don’t think that would be a competitive and maybe beat the season would be a great opportunity to show the world that we’re at the top of our game and we’re still working hard to keep us in the mix."

Two days after Lochte spoke with reporters about an incident he described as robbery, he was drawn his gun, no robbery had "It’s traumatic for me. I’m 1.5 of which came from Aaron ntime when I think people will think it is safe to say that this statement from Lochte truly sums up just how immature he is and how inexperienced he is of currently being called an Olympian.

Nearly a month after the incident, Lochte’s punishment has been announced. A month suspension from domestic and international competitions has been enacted on the swimmer. The ban will prevent Lochte from swimming in the 2016 World Championships in Budapest. In addition, Lochte will lose his $1 million contract for Dancing With the Stars. A 20-hour community service requirement has also been added to the swimmer’s “heavy load” as well.

While Lochte has not been stripped of his Olympic medals for the incident, the loss of the stipend and domestic community service hours seems like a gentle slap on the wrist for someone who is supposed to be an exemplary athlete and role model for young athletes around the globe. If we hold our athletes to a higher standard than we do our politicians, what does this say about our public integrity as a nation? Where do our priorities lie? While Lochte’s light punishment say it is safe to say that both 2016 and Brazil’s feel that this statement is lacking in substance and Lochte has a lot of work – and apologizing and truth-telling – ahead of him before he can hope to return to the level of respect he enjoyed in Brazil.
Volleyball continues fast start to season

The Scots have enjoyed a hot start to the season, going 5-1 over their first eight games; they have dropped just five sets all year. “It’s been a great year for us with our ability to adjust in and between games,” co-captain Lyndsey Webster ’17 said. “That’s something we’ve improved upon.”

Last year, the Scots had a similar start to the season, going 5-1 over their first six games. However, they limped to a 12-16 final record. The women are determined to ensure that last year’s success happens again. “Every day when we come to the gym, we want to get better,” said Webster. “There has been lots of competition in practice.”

Topically with conference coming up, we know we have to raise our level of play,” Blue said. That may be tough to do, but Webster and Blue say the team’s mindset is better compared to last year. “There’s more maturity in the team atmosphere. Our attitude has done a complete 180 from last year,” Webster said. “When we have to come together, we’ll be able to rise to the occasion.”

BRONCOS TO FACE DISCIPLINE

NFL commissioner Roger Goodell said that Denver Broncos players can expect to face disciplinary action following repeated helmet-to-helmet hits to Carolina Panthers quarterback Cam Newton on Sept. 8.

The statement comes in the midst of heavy scrutiny of the NFL’s player safety policies, especially its concussion protocol. Newton appeared to be concussed, but was allowed to stay in the game.
