As We Say It... No More News

WE HAVE DECIDED to discontinue our World News Roundup, which has been a regular feature for many years. We feel we are not doing justice to the material we have been receiving, and the student body has become sufficiently aware of what is going on in the world that we are no longer contributing new information in the past few weeks to bear merit to following the complete reports from the daily press and radio. We hope, we gained right. What do you think?

The Professor

NOW THAT the annual struggle with those masculine members of our staff and of our Independent Study papers is over and dinner is perhaps it wouldn’t be out of order to say something near about the faculty. We have a lecture tonight.

JUST TO show that we are not the only ones who have thought of the idea, we’re turning over the actual setting of it to another student in another college. Ed Fryden, columnist for the University of Pittsburgh’s student paper, the Pitt News, has this to say about the professorial drive.

“The MAN who follows the teaching trade in the States in this year of our Lord, 1951, and just past a quarter of degrees. He has to be more than just a learned scholar and a kind of kid for the students.

“HE HAS to have a lot of something – Ceremonial oritness, I don’t know – the sort of all-business, all-influenza substance, courage. Along with all this, he has to have a certain degree of intelligence.

PROBABLY NO other professional group in the field so much as lays responsibility on the shoulders of its members as do the academicians. They are the prophets. They are mentioned almost every day in the newspapers, and the more so, the more he has to have a certain amount of certainty.

“THE TRUTH of the matter is that the pack’s only deviation from the true way, the American way, is very much to the advantage of the institution. No other group is content with so little of the pack’s output. They have too much stake in the institution to give up the advantages of their own superiority, of their own advantage.

“THE PROFESSES have been charged with almost every kind of shabby trick. The theology solutions can condescend. They say our venerable ancestors should not be lulling, another way, corrupting us with that false idolology, the Truth, although we are bound to say the pack’s a fraud.

No other group is content with so little of the pack’s output. They have too much stake in the institution to give up the advantages of their own superiority, of their own advantage.

“We could raddle on some more, mentioning the pack’s insincerity, its hypocrisy, its hypocrisy, its insincerity, etc., etc., and help and helpful interest many professors show in getting us in postgraduate schools and jobs.

“BUT PERHAPS we could cover all that by implication if we say that despite our habitual inadmitting of it, we do realize that we don’t appreciate them enough.

The new draft examination plan has drawn many varying opinions from people ranging all the way from a hearty recommendation to keep college students in the schools in a suggestion that the plan should be accepted in favor of Universal Military Training. Wooster newspapers have been assured in an effort to win whether or not the plan is considered better or better.

The question of discrimination in this examination plan shows.

Rev. Theodore Dew of the Winter Methodist church feels that "the plan is intolerable because its leadership must not be allowed to discriminate against those who are possess of great intellect and welfare would suffer.
The two sides of the plan is excellent whether in college or not, in order to sell new and personal issues to either the cry for education.

Similarly, Sisbert Gower Graysen says that the plan is very good because we have more educated people, and this means having a certain number of college graduates every year. But how can we see that the fact that the plan will discriminate against fellows who can't afford to go to college?

Then, through the plan seems to have some very great problems, it suffers from a lack of a opposition through discrimination. Mr. J. B. Williams advises us that the plan at first glance is not democratic because and doesn't give everyone an equal chance. However, if those who point out the need ask is in the people requirement of service it would be much more

Fireman Paul Clark has an answer for the question that says that students who obtain the degrees or postgraduate to go on the list that is required to take some annual course, usually science and mathematics, which will be more valuable to them if they have to engage the service later. KOEI, if possible, should be mandatory.

Junior Bob Reds believes that practical examination plan will prove difficult in the fact that they are expected to prepare to continue in college because of the practical service, which can be very rigorous, and are no recognized for some exteriors.
This means a great deal of and is with others who cannot attract the same attention to the plan because in order to get in.

The best of the athlete however persuade critics the plan seems to

OFFER STUDENTS LOW RATES ON EUROPEAN TOUR

Assessment of a low student takes of $300 in dollars for round-trip transportation to Europe this summer made by the College on travel, an organization of 70 major educational and religious organizations interested in foreign study and travel.

Two ships, American B-25, operated by a Norwegian company will carry 1,300 passengers to Le Havre, France, and will sail from New York. Tours begin May 23 and July 4, and return trips begin August 1 and September 15.

The activity is followed up by the surveillance of Mr. Rebsamen, Dec. follow of the Daily Record. "It would be dangerous to set some biases fall on the test who are true developers and have not yet reached their highest standards. Many C students rise to A and A work as they reach safety that they would be too late for the draft exam. This encouraged a potential source of bitter drags and repeat many of their class to obtain high goals."e.

Sister Ed Crow feels that the local Military Training would ease most prejudices and also help the colleges to maintain their enrollment.

He expidi: that the school's would fail at first, as they did through the year, but when the number of men in the "A4" became something there will be many men coming out of service as going on. Thus, the school could give back the attendance they had lost.

A more important problem arises now is something which the plan will afflict college students. Freshmen who listen to Jack Benny objects because it doesn't completely serve its purpose. it doesn't "speak the same feet as normally."
