Five Experts Spark Symposium

THEODORE GREEN

MERLE CURTI

REINHOLD NIEBUHR

"20th Century Concepts" Theme Of October Series

"Twentieth Century Concepts of Man" will be the theme of a five-man symposium to be held here October 25, 26 and 27, President Howard Lowry announced today.

Speakers at the symposium, a rededication year feature, will be J. Robert Oppenheimer, director of the Institute for Advanced Studies, Princeton, N. J.; Reinhold Niebuhr, professor of Applied Christianity at Union Theological Seminary, New York City; Mark Van Doren, professor of English, Columbia University, New York City; and Merle Curti, professor of history, University of Wisconsin, Madison, Wis. A concluding synthesis will be given by Theodore Meyer Greene, professor of philosophy, Yale University, New Haven, Conn.

The theme of the symposium emphasizes the changes which have taken place in the last half century in intellectual thought and in man's concept of himself in the midst of revolutionary material and technical changes.

The symposium will begin Thursday afternoon, October 25, when Mark Van Doren, well known author and editor, will speak on "Twentieth Century Concepts of Man" as they apply to literature and fine art. That evening Merle Curti, noted historian and 1943 Pulitzer prize winner, will speak on social and political thought.

On Friday afternoon, October 26, J. Robert Oppenheimer, atomic physicist and philosopher, will discuss the scientific aspects of the topic, and in the evening Reinhold Niebuhr, eminent clergyman and philosopher, will speak on religion and philosophy.

Saturday morning Theodore Greene, philosopher and author, will present a synthesis taking into account the ideas advanced by the other speakers.

All addresses will be given in Memorial Chapel. Following each evening event there will be a reception in Babcock Hall to honor the speakers.

Wooster's symposium on "Twentieth Century Concepts of Man" is the first in a series of special academic events to take place on the campus during the rededication year 1951-52. This anniversary marks the fiftieth year since the recovery and rebuilding of the college following the disastrous fire of December 11, 1901.

Senate Posts Migration Lists

A balance of $2,865.93 was reported by treasurer Bob Atwell to Student Senators Monday evening as the present working capital of the representative body. According to the report, $62 was cleared on freshman beanies, and $299.70 was netted on Color Day last spring.

Other items of business included the passing of a motion by Bob Atwell to allocate up to $60 for cheerleaders' expenses, including sweaters and letters. The motion followed a request made by Roscoe Schwartz, speaking in behalf of the cheerleaders.

Tom Wise, Migration Day chairman, reported that a list for names and dining rooms of those wishing seats on Senate-reserved buses for the migration, will be posted in the front entrance of Kauke on Monday. Food service will pack box lunches for those making the trip. Students reserving seats are responsible for them, emphasized the chairman.

Appointments made by the Senators included Don Leber as Career Counseling chairman. He will work with Mr. Paul Barrett in planning career conferences. Bruce Becker was named chairman of Homecoming activities. A standing decoration committee was selected with Paul Clark, chairman, assisted by Fred Downs, Pat Taft, Betty Jane Mitchell, and John Williams.

President Elwood Sperry named John Keitt chairman of a committee to investigate additional steps necessary to bring action on the proposed enlargement of the Student Union.

W F Schedules Picnic Saturday

All students are invited to join Westminster Fellowship in its annual outing Saturday evening at 7:30. Meeting on the green next to Babcock, the group will hike to Highland Park for a picnic, games, singing, marshmallow roast, and a campfire service.

Leaders of campfire groups will include Jim Hughes, Migs Bonnell, Paul Wright, Gordon Roadarmel, Don Elliot, Dotty Caldwell, Pat Fester, Willard Mellon, Dick Carter, Connie Berg, Larry Drewry, Ron Felty, Fred Wollerman, and Ruth Folta.

WCW Returns to Air, Features Variety

Campus radio station WCW will begin its third year of broadcasting Monday evening, Oct. 1, with a program featuring Mr. Howard Becknell, new radio professor.

Operating with 18 watts, 540 on the dial, the station will be on the air every night Sunday through Friday 10:00 to 11:45 with programs presented and directed by students of the speech department. It is possible that additional time may be secured, probably in the late afternoon, when clubs and organizations will broadcast.

Kent Williams, program chairman, is planning a large variety of programs including disc jockeys, quizzes, and student talent. Maxine Schnitzer and Bob Clark will preside over the campus quiz show, "Wits and Half-wits". Jim Boeringer, music director, has arranged for a program of classical music every night, with Benjamin Britten featured. Weekly features include an analysis of the news by Mr. Bindley on Thursday nights from 10:00 to 10:15, and a 15 minute program of music presented by Mr. Dierck's piano students, with Mr. Dierck playing the first two programs.

A resume of sports will be broadcast regularly by a reporter yet to be announced. Sports news will be given a feminine touch in a semi-monthly program with Nancy Drown as announcer and Anita Jacobs, editor and compiler.

A new idea, a microphone technique "training program", will be used this year, to enable organizations to improve their programs by "getting the feel of the mike" with preliminary practice.

Radio apparatus recently underwent several changes credited to chief engineer Jim Andress, who spent the summer making technical improvements. He put in remote lines to the chapel and Taylor stage, making broadcasting possible from both places. He also improved both the appearance and the safety of the studio by rewiring it. Reception is expected to be improved.

Clubs wishing to reserve a time for programs or publicity should contact the speech department and arrangements will be made, usually on a bi-weekly basis. IRC, WF, Chem Club, Pre-Min, and YWCA have already taken advantage of this service and all other organizations are invited to do so.

"Broadway Music Box," a program of recent hits from Broadway musicals, will be heard from 10:30 to 11 p. m., with "South Pacific" the first of the series. Jane Wyckoff will announce, and Dick Sheppard is the script writer.

Graduate School Exams Are Offered Next Month

Prospective 1952 graduate students will have their first of four chances to take the graduate record examinations on Friday and Saturday, Oct. 16 and 27, according to an announcement from the educational testing service. Other testing dates scheduled are February 1 and 2, May 2 and 3, and August 1 and 2. Students are advised to inquire whether or not the examinations are required for entrance to the various schools.

Application forms and a bulletin of information may be obtained from the registrar's office.

Antics Of Day Family Slated For Homecoming

In the delightful comedy roles of Vinnie and Father, Corinne Snuffer and Bill McGraw will lead the cast of Life With Mother, slated for presentation on Oct. 17, 18, 19, and 20 in Wooster's Little Theater.

The Homecoming production is a sequel to the Lindsay and Crouse hit, Life With Father, successfully presented here three years ago. Most of the familiar characters appear with some sparkling additions, including Cousin Cora's husband and an old sweetheart of Father's. The plot centers around the engagement of one of the Day boys, his difficulties in obtaining a ring, and Vinnie's determination to have one herself at long last.

Casting is incomplete and characters may be shifted as rehearsals begin this week, explained director W. C. Craig. Present assignments include Paul Wright as John; James Schreiber, Whitney; Susan Staffler, Margaret; Don Haskell, Michael; Sandy Wishart, Clarence; Peg Batterman, Bridget; Barbara Ward, Hazel Willoughby; Susan Weaver, Bessie Fuller Logan; Maxine Schnitzer, Mrs. Willoughby; Willard Mellin, Clyde Miller; Mary Ferris, Cousin Cora.

Club Merger Forms Signets

A merger of two women's social clubs, the Dominoes and Spuds, was approved by members and the Interclub Council last week. The new organization is to be known as the Signets, its Greek name being Sigma Gamma Nu.

Officers include Virginia Keenan and Marian Van Gorder, co-presidents; Pat Lengel, vice-president; Jean Lengel, secretary; Mildred Loehlin, scribe; and Carol Kardos and Marge Eakin, co-treasurers.

Frosh Seek Bag Rush Victory In Hope of Discarding Beanies

Freshmen and sophomores will clash early Saturday morning, Oct. 6, in the annual bag rush to determine whether or not freshmen will wear their beanies until Thanksgiving recess.

Women Elect Dorm Officers

Women in the upperclass dorms chose their officers for the coming year at the semester's first house meetings, held Sunday evening.

Dorm presidents and social chairmen were elected as follows: Tina MacNair, president and Joan Whittenmyer, social chairman, Babcock; Mary Jane Reimer and Barbara Langdon, Holden; Mickie McFadden and Pat Taft, Holden Annex; Dotty Hoffmire and Carolyn Wedge, Westminster; Sue Carmany and Nancy Morgan, Scott; Jean Laurie and Vivien Smith, Korner.

Freshman girls have not elected their officers, but temporary appointments to the administrative posts have been made. Servings as presidents and social chairmen, respectively, are: Ardith Spierling and Bev Lindholm, Hoover; Cynthia Kimber and Joy Hatfield, Miller; Geraldine Messina and Shirley Petree, Bowman.

Band Dons Kilts For Grid Clash

The Scot's kiltie band will march for the first time this year at the Ohio Northern game Saturday.

Marching down the hill before kickoff time, the band will feature its two bagpipers, George Booth, and Dave Funk, alumnus.

At half time sixty-three band members led by drum major Jim Kardos and majorettes Carol McCool, Donna Erbland, Judy Null and Nancy Manrow, will present four new formations.

Daily practice has been held this week by director Richard Secord to prepare new routines for Saturday's game. In the future the members will rehearse on Tuesday and Thursday afternoons from 4:15 to 5:45.

As a result of tryouts held on Wednesday and Thursday of last week, thirty-five per cent of the band is composed of new members. Trumpet players are still needed.

A trip to Denison on Migration Day and a possible appearance in the Cleveland baseball stadium for a benefit game are being planned.

Returning students who have not received their 1951 Indexes may pick them up at the Index office in lower Kauke on Monday afternoon from 3 to 5 p. m. Following Monday, copies will not be held.

Revised enrollment figures released by the registrar this week bring the total number of students on the campus to 1,077, a drop of nearly 100 below last year September's figures. Men students total 580, while women number 497.

Concert Series Opens Soon

Season tickets for the annual Community Concert series will go on sale next Monday, Oct. 1, through dormitory representatives. Only 300 memberships are available to students.

The opening program of the season on Oct. 30 will present the de Paur Infantry chorus, a group of 35 Negro ex-G.I.'s. The rest of the proposed schedule includes symphony concerts on Nov. 28 and Mar. 19, conducted by Mr. Alan Collins and Mr. Richard Gore, respectively. January 10 has been set as the tentative date for the appearance of the young Italian pianist, Ciccolini. At least one more concert is yet to be announced.

No single one-concert tickets will be sold.

Sunday Teas Initiate Rushing By Eight Campus Social Clubs

The annual rites of the eight female tribes begin this Sunday in the parlors and recreation rooms on campus when sophomore and transfer women are invited to don their best bonnets and war paint to partake in the ceremonial drinking of punch, munching of cookies and clapping of hands.

The closest thing to rushing that takes place on Wooster's democratic campus, the teas are designed to acquaint the prospective club member with her fellow students and with all of the social clubs.

The schedule of the teas is as follows: Echos 4:00-5:15 in Holden, Imps 2:15-3:30 in Babcock parlor, Keys 2:15-3:30 in the large room of lower Babcock, Peanuts 4:00-5:15 in the small room of lower Babcock, Pyramids 4:00-5:15 in the large room of lower Babcock, Signets 2:15-3:30 in Holden, Sphinx 4:00-5:15 in Babcock parlor, and Trumps 2:15-3:30 in the small room, lower Babcock.

Scots Entertain Ohio Northern

Visitors Will Unfurl Speedy Attack As They Run Sweeps, Passes from T

Two speedy T formations with the same fundamental type of offense will collide Saturday afternoon when the Scots take the field of Severence stadium to entertain Ohio Northern.

Through three years of T formation play, the Polar Bears of Ohio Northern have developed a fast, well-experienced team. This season they have scrapped experience for a promising group of sophomores and juniors.

Sparking the outfit is halfback Jack Decker, a 165 pound junior who received honors as an all-state back in 1949.

Bears Use Pass Attack

The Polar Bears are expected to stage a strong passing attack with quarterback George Adams doing most of the throwing. Their starting line will average only 178 pounds compared to 182 pounds for the Scots and their backfield will weigh 166 pounds, giving the Black and Gold a slight weight margin in both departments.

Because of their light, fast team, the Polar Bears like to skirt the ends. They displayed this in their two previous contests this season when they trampled Cedarville 28-0 Sept. 15 and bowed before a strong Wittenberg machine 32-0 Sept. 22.

Scots Rely On Youth

Against the Polar Bears, Wooster will be using approximately the same combination that downed Hiram Saturday. This team is composed of four freshmen, six sophomores, and one junior.

Ward Lehr and Dick Milligan will be the ends with Fred Smith and Jim Crow holding down the tackle positions. At guard will be Bob Beidler and Dan DeArment, Jack Dowd will start at center.

Jim Ewers will be directing the attack from quarterback slot, with John Siskowic and Jerry Behringer, two swift backs, at the halfback posts. Ned Martin will play fullback.

Long Runs Score In Opening Game

Freshman members of the Scott grid team were the standouts as the Black and Gold won its opening game Saturday at Hiram by defeating the home team 13-9. Two freshmen scored all of Wooster's points.

Fullback Ned Martin sliced off guard and traveled 35 yards for the first tally of the contest and Halfback John Siskowic provided the winning points when he swept left end and scampered for 66 yards.

The Scots preserved their lead by stopping Hiram inches before the goal in the third quarter.

Dukes Up! TEAM STARTED WELL, SHOWED HIGH PROMISE

With Dick Duke

"HOW DO THEY LOOK?"

This was the query which greeted almost everyone of the hundred and some Scotsmen who followed their team to Hiram Saturday. It was a rainy, depressing day and neither the town of Hiram nor its college promised reward for the 70-mile journey the wavers-of-the-plaid took. They didn't travel just to see the countryside roll by; they went to Hiram to see their team play its first game.

What they saw was good. They saw the Black and Gold put up a battle adequate enough to produce victory. They saw mistakes too and reported them when they returned home to the questioning of their friends. "The pass defense looked poor" stood out as their chief comment.

Therein lies the tragedy of this tale. Members of the Clan seemed to see only part of the Scot '51 gridiron picture. They saw their team open its season against a college reported to have an enrollment of only 400 but they did not see their team roll up an overwhelming score.

Hiram Had More Drill Days

They apparently did not know that each one of Hiram's linemen averaged 28 pounds heavier than the Wooster man he lined up against, that the Hiram backfield man for man averaged 19 pounds more than Wooster's, and that Wooster had a scant 10 days of practice while Hiram had 15.

The joker in the deck is that the Scots are still learning. They unashamedly entered Saturday's encounter with an offense consisting of only two plays: around right end and left end and through one part of the line. The fact that they have not yet tried to learn is reason for optimism.

Comparing Wooster performance on Hiram's field with performance on the practice field, one truth stands out: each phase of the Black and Gold's game was successful in proportion to the amount of time spent on that phase. Hilltoppers chief criticism of the Scots' play—that pass defense was weak—is borne out by statistics showing that Hiram gained 114 yards from its aerial attack. Wooster had spent little time on pass defense.

Scots Traded Yards For Win

The obvious cause for the report that pass defense is not adequate was the threat Hiram made by completing three successive passes for 48 yards in the closing moments of the game. Up against a good passer throwing with the wind behind him, the Scots played conservative ball to protect their four-point lead. They would over-estimate the length of the pass, allowing the potential receiver an unhampered chance for the catch, but they never let him go anyplace with the ball.

When Hiram unleashed its fourth pass in succession, this time into the end zone where a catch meant victory, Wooster's defense showed it could cope with passes and then drove the point home hard on the next play by throwing the passer for a nine yard loss.

Everyone is entitled to his opinion. Mine is that Wooster's gridders are good. In their initial encounter they displayed potentialities of developing into a strong team. If this week's five days of practice improve them as much over their level of play at Hiram as last week's five days advanced their ability as revealed in the scrimmage with Ashland, the Scots will have taken a big step toward their potential.

Iran—A World Crisis?

THE IRANIAN CRISIS has been generally viewed in this part of the world as another stage in the struggle between Communism and the West, a struggle for economic resources and for the loyalties of men in those middle-ground areas where the two great protagonists come into closest geographic contact.

But there is another aspect to the Iranian problem — the internal viewpoint. The key figure is that of Mohammed Mossadegh, the sick and occasionally hysterical premier, whose government derives its power from the emotional vitality generated by the concept of oil nationalization among the Iranian masses. In certain respects Mossadegh's regime represents a vital revolutionary impulse directed against foreign interests, and against the domestic oligarchy cooperating with those interests.

HOWEVER, THE NATIONALISTIC PRIDE aroused around the idea of oil nationalization has gone beyond legitimate patriotism, and has degenerated into a fanatical, and in certain respects, suicidal chauvinism, which, paradoxically, fails to see its own self-interest in clear terms. A state cannot survive on sheer national egotism and popular enthusiasm, unless these energies are placed behind a program of action which takes true account of the economic and political realities of the situation.

IN ECONOMIC AFFAIRS, the Mossadegh governing faction has displayed what can only be described as a tragic naivete. Having cheerfully confiscated the British built and financed Anglo-Iranian Oil Company—thereby depriving Iran of $840,000 daily in oil revenues—they expressed surprise and dismay at British action in partly curtailing the conversion of Iranian sterling into dollars. Having deprived Britain of a major dollar earner, Mossadegh apparently expected to continue to be supplied with dollars from Britain's own already over-strained dollar resources.

In short, the present government, or some succeeding government, must make a series of concessions and compromises if Iran is to regain her political equilibrium and her economic viability. Internally, she must display greater concern for political democracy and adopt more intelligent economic policies.

INTERNATIONALLY, IRAN'S BEST COURSE is to compromise with Britain along the lines of the generous proposition offered by the Stokes mission. She can scarcely lose her sense of freedom by so doing; for the two nations' interests are, after all, fairly close together.

International Set Meets Wooster; Approves American Campus Life

By Pat Blosser

Wooster's campus boasts the addition of nine new foreign students, six of them freshmen, one a sophomore, and two special students.

Newlywed Scots Continue Studies

by Liz Blumberg

Twelve and one half newly wed couples have returned to the campus this fall to finish their education. The half couple is Jeanne Babcock Carley, who is living in Babcock Hall. Her husband, Harold J. Carley is with the Air Force at Sampson, Geneva, New York. They were married June 16, in Lockport, N. Y.

Five of the couples were married in Wooster. Ellis Clouse and the former Mary Jean Bennett, who are living in T-4-C, were married June 9. Harry Stultz and the former Gladys Wampler, living in T-4-A, were married June 11. Gene Pritchard and Adelaide Watson were married August 4. They are living at 616 Beall Ave. Bill Shaffer and Jane Murray, now living in T-4-B, were married August 10. Alan Van Wie and Judy Tilford were married September 2. Their address is T-1-A.

Dale Chastain and Marjean Hartzler were married in Louisville, July 21. They are living at 868 Park Blvd. in Wooster. Ed Malin and Georgia High, now living at 151 Beall Ave., were married August 4, in Wilmington, Del. Pete Sprague was married to Mary Lou Adsit August 25 in Redfield, New York. 1505 Cleveland Rd. is their present address. Lorrin Kreider and Nancy Barnes, now living at 328 E. Bowman, were wed in Youngstown August 26. Jack Pallone and Doris Digel were married in Cleveland August 25. They are living in S-7-C. Jack Hayward and the former Jo Lord are also living in the Stadium units: S-6-D. They were married September 8, in Bryn Mayr, Pa.

Mr. and Mrs. Bob Armstrong (Joan Van Scoyk) are at home at 346 E. Bowman after a Sept. 1 wedding in Cleveland.

The four freshman Canadians, David Donald, Elizabeth Ross, Dolores Ross, and Nancy Provan, do not find too much difference between Wooster and their home towns. Both Elizabeth Compton Ross and David Donald are the children of Wooster alumni and have visited the campus before coming here this month. Elizabeth graduated from the Laurel School in Cleveland and is therefore acquainted with Ohio. Dolores came to Wooster to major in music, David for the M.I.T. plan, and Nancy came for a "liberal education."

Another student who came to Wooster to major in music is Elsa Somers from Mexico. Although Elsa had been in the States before coming here, the houses, climate, and surroundings are new and different to her.

Priscilla Ling also comes to Wooster from a warmer climate. Pris is the sophomore of the group, having transferred from Jackson College in Honolulu, her home. Pris, who likes dormitory life, is waiting for winter so she can see snow for the first time.

Not every freshman gets to meet the president of his prospective college before he is actually enrolled but Gvido Gramberg from Buenos Aires, Argentina, met Dr. Lowry while the president was on his South American trip this summer. Gvido and his parents came to Buenos Aires from Latvia about three years ago. He is surprised at the size of the campus, "overwhelmed" by the warm welcome he has received, and puzzled by a few things, such as registration and freshman hazing.

Another person who comes from Buenos Aires is Maria Vela-Huergo. Miss Vela-Huergo just arrived on campus last week. In her capacity as a "special student" she will assist in conversation in the Spanish department and take a few courses in other subjects.

Miss Odile Danton from Paris, France, is assisting in the French department and is also the head resident at the French house. She finds the campus similar to Cambridge University in England.

Whips and Scorns . . . By Bentley Duncan

NOW THAT THE FIRST FEW DAYS of school are over we have something to be thankful for: we have finally run through all our "introductory" lectures. Traditionally, the first classroom period of a course is devoted to an introductory talk which lasts about half the period and then the class is dismissed. The half hour off is supposedly the result of student pressure. But the truth is that after three months of indolent torture ludicrously known as "vacation," the prof knows less about the course he has to teach than his students. He therefore fumbles around with an introduction which could be used for any course from Neo-Phoenician Architecture to the Embryology of Fleurum Bangbangbus. Finally, after a few painful attempts at humor, the prof runs out of words and lets his questionless students mercifully escape. Having then blundered into the smoky repose of the Shack, the hapless student rehabilitates himself with a cup of coffee and composes himself for the next "introduction."

Some day some student is going to float into his opening class, grimly determined to endure the next few minutes, only to find an icy prof—utterly indifferent as to who his students are—armed with an abstruse lecture on the most difficult aspect of the subject matter. The effect would be extraordinary. Without having their morale weakened by pointless humor, or their courage undermined by dull talk about tests and grades and procedures, the gasping students would be scribbling furiously, minds clutching avidly at the concepts elucidated. The initial momentum thus gained would be so great that the class would be ready for their finals at midsemester.

THE EARLY DAYS OF SCHOOL bring another great evil—freshman hazing. The pathological practices associated with this manifestation of student barbarism are defended on the grounds that it is all clean fun, that it is funny, that it provides a test of character—revealing those who "can take it"—and that moreover, young people must have an outlet, etc., ad nauseam. Now I submit to you, that any freshman whose mind is not aroused to indignation by this trial by idiocy is incapable of cherishing any noble or generous sentiment.

When are we going to break the bonds of students to wander around the campus in absurd costumes, and to submit to the freshman "run-out"—which is surely a boring, tiring, humorless, witless performance for tormentor and tormented alike? Why not limit the hazing to the wearing of caps, the learning of rules, and to an athletic competition of perhaps greater scope than the present bag-rush? We can only hope that the class of '55, when their turn comes, will show themselves to be better men and women than their predecessors.

FRESHMAN HAZING OF COURSE PALES in significance when compared to those greater manifestations of mass psychoses, Hell Week and the pledging for the women's clubs. These activities merely give the more repressed members of the community a chance to express the more distorted aspects of their personalities. The feeble soul who becomes a tyrant overnight is the common example of this. Regardless of what the embattled barons of Kenarden may have to say on the subject, I am certain that there is a large segment of enlightened students who would gladly see Wooster well rid of these and other examples of moronic immaturity.
