In Our Opinion—

Segregation Is Constitutional

At the beginning of this last week, the Federal Supreme Court announced a decision in a case in public schools is inherently unequal, thus abandoning their former stand which held that schools can be separate as long as they are equal. From the days of John Mitchell through the era of the great dissenters until the present, the issue of segregation in public schools has been increasingly read a social philosophy into their decisions. James Reim, in resented more on the social sciences than on legal precedents—a procedure often criticized by opponents of integration as mind and heart rather than on equal school facilities, a principle which is very difficult to justify by law.

Previously, the Supreme Court has almost universally upheld the principle that their jurisdiction extends only to cases of law, arriving generally on the basis of constitutional interpretations.
They had always considered it their job to interpret a law in relation to the constitution, not to judge the law upon constitutions based upon color, or to enforce social, as distinguished from political, liberty. This is the reason for the great need for a building the walls of the people are more accurately represented and cared for.

Professors Plan Vacation: Several To Tour Europe

by Sherry Slater

Wooster professors are full of ambition! Yes, sir, this summer holds many experiences in store for them. Take Mr. Trump for example. He plans to hoe Mr. Gore's tomatoes while Mr. Gore is studying just how green the beans will be. Then, too, there's going to be a most imaginative trip to Europe. The McGraws are leaving July 4 from New York City, with a wide group from the Institute of Technology and will cover nine countries in two months. They will attend two sessions, one while in Europe to the other in Paris, and two stage productions in Munich, Germany, and Brussels, Belgium. In the meanwhile, the many tours will be a visit to Bulgaria, a study of the Slavic languages in Sofia, and Heidelberg, Germany. Included in the tour is a visit for local school of which Mr. McGraw plans to use in looking up a friend in Switzerland who is also a retired professor of French.

Steady Tour

Miss Guille and Miss Harbach are taking French and Spanish students on a steady tour through Europe. They leave together on another ship, the Winsham, on June 21. A special ship is used for this trip. It includes in its schedule many countries and areas of the culture and history of various countries for extensive travel. They will dock in Holland, visit Amsterdam, and then cross over to London, England. Here they will see the Tower of London, Westminster Abbey, British Museum, Buckingham Palace, University College School, and Windsor Castle, and enjoy another of the many tours in Rome where the French group will study the French School. The Spanish Party will sightsee and then more to Rome to spend the summer. The group also visits Grenoble, France, August in the Alps, and continues to London, Paris, and London, Switzerland, and to London for two days of rest and relaxation. They will leave for London, England, and sail back to New York, Europe's most modern and interesting is featured in this trip, the new use and duty. The Black Forest, Rothenburg, London, and Belgium. August 25 will find them sailing back home. Miss Ludlow will be in Europe—travelling independently but joining the groups now and then.

Other European Travelers

Europe will also be visited by Jack Carmel, Dan Eckert and Stan Snedegger. Mr. Carmel will combine his passion for red Williams, a Wooster graduate in photography. They are meeting a reconstituted France, Spain, and Germany. Mr. Carrell's only concern concerning the entire trip was quite heavy -- I do not intend to give any lectures or speeches about photography for Mr. Snedegger and Mr. Eckert. Mr. Carmel will have to go to France to travel and will arrive until he is ready to return to his duties. Miss Ludlow will be in Europe—travelling independently but joining the groups now and then.

America Touring, Too

Another traveler is Dr. Severson, who is planning a trip around the United States. Mrs. Severson's duties. However, she knows there is a good possibility of spending his vacation in summer in Mexico.
