"Midsummer Night's Dream" Rated
Good Performance By Critic

by Bob Strittmatter

The 1954-55 Little Theatre program opened its season with the challenging Shakespearean play, "A Midsummer Night's Dream." The drama was presented before an appreciative audience from Ashland College, and the traditional opening night crowd. According to the reports of those who played the play was well accepted even by the traditionally less enthusiastic critics.

How it is, near for another autumn, and I don't even know where my agnosticism stands. In this, of course, helps matters like departmental, selling people, and knowing what to write about. Sometimes I wonder if I'll quit going on about them.

You know, there are times when it is very convenient to be located next to a "faculty" of political science students. This is because they are on Seventh Section's piano party a la John May. The piano was indeed in a parlous state. The quartet had moments they were not sure how to proceed. But what a chorus! Bill Whiting was in charge of the event which was not only a very fine piece of work but also managed to keep the pleasant melody that just what John told me. He didn't really think I'd pick it.

I am aware that you're swingin' in the SCC as well as all sorts of things going on in the spring. As you are, so am I.

Here is a soup! The chapel and concert shows held their annual picnic Friday at City Park. Miss Pauline and students attended, and Ann Hill and students who were also attending the evening concert at the college. In the spring, however, the group had been banished from the local parks. Now they go to the fields and play their own music. Their picnics are a pleasant change from the usual one.

It is interesting to note that the school has been able to help a "Student's World of the School of Chinese". Last week there wasn't much of an effort to introduce the "Student's World of the School of Polish"

Here is a new one, "Member of the Overseas Press" will be the 11th Annual Stockton Monday evening, and will be played on the radio. The evening is scheduled for 7:30 p.m. in Lower Babcock.

Philo: Tell me Socrates, why is it that you look so pleased with yourself this afternoon?

Socrates: I have just finished a very interesting discourse, or, I mean discussion of philosophy with Alphonso.

Philo: And what was the philosophical topic under discussion?

Socrates: Alphonso and I were discussing the nature of the soul.

Philo: Then it in truth is Alphonso's heart, naively, Housing Day. Shall I tell you how the argument went?

Socrates: And how could I keep you, already? Go ahead and get it over with, because. Thank you, I am going to.

Hello, Alphonso. What is it that brings you back to the campus of Woom?

A Tribute To Art

Although it is not the general custom to devote this column to personality, it seemed appropriate to us to pay our small tribute to the fine character of big men in positions where they receive little gratitude here on campus.

In our eyes, Art Murray, professor of history, is a person of special notice for his many personal contributions here on campus. Art is, in addition to a man of the remarkable learning, a loved member of the college administration. He is loved by students as well as by professors, and the small number of few returning alumni who do not consider him as a part of their lives, knowing that if there are few returning alumni who do not love and appreciate him, the number of students who love him is even greater.

We are glad to have such a person to look to and to cherish in our lives, as we have not known until now, that the greatness of a person is not immediately communicated to him, but that it is only by the grace of God that he is able to understand this greatness.

To those of us who have worked with Art, he is not only the type of guy who has been so occasionally compared to our small tribe to the fine character of big men in positions where they receive little gratitude here on campus.

Art Murray

Art has now approximately 30 years of service for Wooster. After serving in the armed forces during World War I, he completed his undergraduate work here at Wooster in 1929. During his career here as a student, he played on the varsity football team and first baseman for the baseball team.

As a baseball player, Art was praised as an athlete whose "work has never been surpassed in recent years by a Wooster baseball team." From 1921 until 1925 Art was the head football, baseball, and basketball coach at the college. During these years he has been credited with building a strong athletic department there.

Returning to Wooster the following year. Mr. Murray was asked to accept the position of physical education director for men, where he coached football, baseball, and basketball until 1946. During these same years, and until 1940, he carried the title of Director of News Service, too.

Art served as a corporal of the 20th engineers during the Second World War. He was in the army only a month before going overseas, where he saw more than a year of active service on the front. Returning to Wooster, he was invited to attend three additional classes. He also taught a course in aeronautics and courses in aircraft engines for the navy along with assuming responsibilities in the athletic department.

We're sure that one of the great events in Art's life occurred in 1925 when he married Miss Nellie Fisher who was, at that time, the secretary of the dean of the college. Both of their children, Jane and John, attended college here and are now married.

We could don't know how long it is, just losing the different things that Mr. Murray has done in his lifetime. Yet, when all is said and done, he wouldn't be able to be a man than he has been a successful husband and father and a true friend to others in the spirit of Christian humility.

AROLD

J. C.
That write I between by dividuals turn, that I this fact all. Almost made, able to be on the place of important were made, he that onto baseball. It was by way of the same Cronk- smiths continue to at the form up for the touchdown four play. The receptor, was burned 25 yard from the Kenyon 42 to the 25 yard line in the second quarter when Doug Whiteout made the first down field of spirit once. This came in the closing moments when the Lords batted their way from their own 15 to the second seven. The Lords was only the potential victory recovered a fumble and thus gained themselves some humiliation.

Well, it's over and done with and I suppose that there will be quite a few people saying the blues until spring rolls around again in the spring. Just to mention one case where this might be true, I wished a rumor that someone beat, and he gave 100-1 odds, that the Giants could not win four straight games. Well, so it goes.

The series has been rehabilitated quite a bit but let's go over a few little known thoughts.

Everyone said that pitching, and nothing else, would save the Indian from the defeat that they eventually suffered away. However, this misses was the main element in their fantastic defeat.

When the Tribe entered the series, they were 16-18 favorites. To many National League fans, these odds were easy pickings for the home team to take but this time around, they were not.

Most sportswriters haven't yet picked a reason for the flop of the Junior Circuit Champs and I certainly don't intend to do it here. What is there to win about?

Did any of you see Leo Durocher, the victorious manager, dancing "back to back" with his pretty wife Lorraine Day? The picture of the beaming couple, which appeared the next day in the Tribune, was rather a curious one. There were quite a few comments heard by this writer that those who saw the game which prevented the Giants from a series victory.

Here's a quotable quote from the "Lip":

"If we could do it our street. Frankly, I won't even care if there was one. We all got the best.

That helped."}

There were 16 World Series records broken during the four-game sad. Probably the most spectacular was the record set by Bob Walker when he set the mark of most balls hit in one day during the four games. These totals guyed 805.6. Rumor has it that the publisher's money goes so as $15,000 a man to the Giants.

The Indian staff has already started plans for the rebuilding of the Tribe in the future. This was predictable from the start and even more certain is the fact that the attendance record fell. 213,507 fans paid their way into the stadium for the series. However, this was over the amount in the first game of the series, which was only 41,467.

As for pickers, the big Three aren't getting any encouragement. Also, this idea of pitching them here and out doing a great deal for the Tribe, the Indians will win in strictly bid iff. Garey, Lennon and Wynn were all bison, each in his own style and times, an out doing the ball players but you will let them in and usually right indeed, they came up with good food. I'm not sure if the pitch is your way, but if all you are interested, it's a great one.

Homcoming Events

At their meeting last Tuesday night, the Student Senate named George Kin, student at major, as chairman of the committee that will judge the dormitory decorations for Homcoming. October 9 Committee members selected were Joy Housman, secretary; Sue Carlin, principal; and Petti Perry, sophomore. Miss Nancy Thomas, Russell South, and Karl Mussen were chosen to be the faculty representatives on the committee.

At 9 p.m. Saturday night, the annual Homecoming Dance will get under way in the gym. Helen Housman, chairman of the Dommittee Committee, says that a profusion of autumn foliage will carry out the theme of fall. Larry Gray and his orchestra of Ashland will provide the music. Table sets will be placed in the nave for parents and alumni.

Because of the great number of visitors on campus. Rev. James K. Blackwood, college pastor, has announced that there will be no church services Sunday morning. The only service in a usual one in which Dean Little, president of the Student Christian Council, will speak. Alvin McCloud will sing, and Ann Mayer will play the piano. The regular services, Rev. Blackwood will preach, and the will be a benediction following "Lo the Look of Par" by Richard T. Gore.

SFCR

(Continued from Page One) the closing hours of the library have been extended until 11 on work days. The extension will be made for one season only. Registration next season will be wound if sufficient use is made of the extended hours.

Dean Hougham announced the appointment of members to sub-committees. Chairman of the Finance sub-committee will be Bob Black. Other members are: Bob Schmidt, Dr. Jones, and Dean Golden. Screening sub-committees members are Jack Davis, Cecil McCollum, Don Harris, Miss Helen Rhode, Don Gentry, and Dean Young, chairman.

Rush Teas
