Three Senate Give Foreign Language Plays

By Louise Byers

Wooster students will soon be given another chance to see their fellow students offer up their talent in foreign languages when the French, German, and Spanish Departments present their plays in a program to be given Friday and Saturday nights, April 15 and 16, Friday’s performance begins at 8 p.m., Saturday’s at 8:15 p.m. These plays are following a very recently instituted tradition. Up until last year, only the French Department had ever given any plays. But it was decided that since drama is in many respects very different in different countries, it would be interesting, as well as educational, to show the three different types in one evening. Last year’s productions proved so successful that it is being done again.

The French play, Mollière’s Le bourgeois Gentilhomme, concerns a man, who through taking all kinds of lessons, wearing only certain clothes, and permitting his family to associate with only certain people, is striving to belong to the class of the nobility. But he is only finding himself and making himself an easy target for deception by those around him. The play is being directed by Miss Guillauf, with Jane Black in charge.

The German play, Mach’s Lehrer’s Lehrer, by Siegfried Sassau, is also a light work about the conduct of a teacher. The student cast, some of whom had never acted before, worked hard to give this play a good presentation.

The Spanish play, El segundo hijo, by Calderon de la Barca, concerns a man who is refused marriage by the girl he loves. He goes to court and has himself thrown in jail, where he writes a play that is presented by the inmates. The performance is directed by Mr. Ronald_USE_.

We would like to take this prerogative to bear down on the public for the simple act of writing a letter to the editor. This is the first time that a member of the administration has attempted to explain a policy of the administration to the public, and we are two years from the presidency, at least. We won't try to hide it; we're thrilled!

Over the last two years, faculty and administration members have continually complained of the poor communication between students and the administration. If it is the desire of the administration and the faculty to publicize its programs and announcements, and explain their standing, it naturally follows that they should use every possible means to accomplish these purposes. The Student Voice is, therefore, the proper forum.

When one side of a story is all that is told, many reasonable people may come to erroneous conclusions. We firmly believe that a student body at Wooster will refrain from much of the usual griping, if they are presented with both sides of an issue. The climate of opinion will change accordingly.

The faculty and the Chapel Committee deserve special congratulations for the fine programs they sponsored during Holy Week this year. Certainly, the aspect of the faculty to student efforts for an offering of the Chapel during Holy Week, a year late, is most rewarding. We hope that the student response to these services will justify their continuation next year.

Student Gains Insight In Washington

In connection with the seminars of this Washington Semester program, the academic directors are constantly asking us just what insights we do gain from all this experience and activity, through almost daily contact with this office, I have come to appreciate to some extent at least its work and role in the nation's political picture.

The Research Division is the research, propaganda producing, and speech writing arm of the Wooster National Committee. It is, as its work is tied closely to that of the parent organization. The Division's primary purpose is to produce speeches and literature, and the Research Director, who is now Mr. Philip M. Stern. The remainder of the staff is made up of research writers, five research specialists, and 12 office workers. In addition the staff often has the assistance of at least five part-time, unpaid workers. The entire staff is appointed on a patronage basis by the incumbent National Committee Chairman, Practically speaking, however, few changes are made at the top with the election of a new Chairman. This is due to the fact that the qualifications of the research is a skilled one and secondary to the qualifications of the individual. An argument for the present method is its use in many universities and larger schools. Larger campuses tend to be more imprinted with the presence of fraternity life, which brings about a greater demand for exact results. This necessity is not applicable to the Wooster situation. Those who have position in this school are in many ways entering a personal contest, and a person who wins, especially if there is a wide margin between the number of votes received by the winner and losers, feels un- popular rather than less capable. Elections here are not cut-throat races, but are democratic contests. ballot. This contest, which is accomplished through the publishing of the number of votes of each candidate, I would be the first to support. But I since the exact results of this ruling have been harmful to all involved, I recommend that it be abolished.

In opposition to the referendum

The in past there have blossomed forth on various bulletin boards the signs of the coming of a petition to the student body. As the result of this petition, this is to form a referendum which will reap all laws of the Student Senate, the by-law which calls for the publication of the Senate's activities in the Wooster Week.

The Division's entire staff spent the day reading the results of the election, which is to support the agreements. At this writing the results of that day's work are being compiled and organized into a fact sheet. The object of this process is twofold: to counteract any unfavorable publicity and to educate the public.

The third function, preparation for elections, is something rather new in the long term sense but something that will show the most con- crete results. Normally this work is carried on only immediately preced- ing an election; however, Mr. Butler, the National Chairman, has decided upon an ambitious preemptive build up. Now, in advance of the 1966 Presidential and Congressional campaigns, the Research Division is developing a file on every Republican Congressmen to study the social and economic constituencies of every Republican politician. A Coffin. His analysis has been done in a method similar to the one used in the national campaign of 1960.

If these ideals are held by the multitude, then surely we are in need of an independent, non-partisan candidate who will not take sides with any group that is not for the welfare of the country and the world.

The Wooster Voice

The students of the Wooster College, 137 Main Street, Wooster, Ohio, 44691, are the only college in the nation that is true to the democratic processes. Since the day that the students of the Wooster College organization was founded, the college has been a haven for those who wish to participate in the democratic process.

The Wooster Voice is the official student publication of the Wooster College. It is published weekly throughout the academic year. Its editorial policy is to be non-partisan and to reflect the views of the student body. It is distributed free to all members of the Wooster College community.

The Wooster Voice is supported by advertising revenue, student contributions, and the proceeds from the sale of student publications.

The Wooster Voice is published by the Wooster College Students Union, 137 Main Street, Wooster, Ohio, 44691.
State Department Plan For Recruits Offers New Exams

The first written examination for candidates for the State’s new recruiting program for the Foreign Service will be conducted in 55 cities throughout the United States on June 24, 1925. A written and oral examination will follow the one day written exam. The closing date for filing applications to participate in this examination is May 2, 1925. Further information and application forms may be obtained by writing the Office of the Foreign Service, U.S. Dep. of State, Washington, D.C.

Salaries Range

Starting salaries for successful candidates range from $1,000 to $2,000 per year. This range is dependent on the age and experience of the individual. In addition, insurance and retirement benefits are granted as usual and sick leave. To be eligible to take the examination, candidates must be at least 18 years old and under 31. American citizens of at least five years’ duration of residence outside the country may be eligible, married, married to a U.S. citizen.

Positions are to be filled both in Washington and overseas.

Applications to the College Student Work Study Program for Scientific and Technical Personnel may be obtained in mail or before June 1.

Also Gives "J" Tests

The government is also giving "J" examinations for Civil Service positions. The Junior Administrative Assistant and the Junior Agricultural Assistant are announced annually. The Junior Professional Assistant and Junior Government positions are announced locally as the needs of the service require.

Other entrance-level professional examinations are announced periodically. Salaries are specified under job titles.

Degrees Determine Pay

A Bachelor’s degree qualifies a candidate for a junior assistant position, and a Master’s degree may start at $1,250 per year. More information may be obtained through Mr. Barret’s office.

Nine different fields of study are covered in the program, including physics, chemistry, geology, chemistry, biological engineering, mathematics, engineering physics, and physical chemistry.

Each fellowship is for one-year periods.

Watts Visits The Russian Embassy

One stormy February afternoon, finding myself downtown with a rare free hour, I decided to see what the diplomatic section of New York was “just for kicks.” It seemed like quite a novel idea at the time, and so I walked through the revolving door,et me see what the door, deciding that, with a big smile, I would remark that “this is as good a place as any to get out of our filthy capitalist weather.”

With the first frost that I can remember, we’re facing the problem of what to do with the children. The usual way of dealing with it, except that it’s advisable to attempt to explain my mission, and only after that, to expose, in some way, my ignorable myself, and convince a handsome young attache that I simply wanted to collect some information on Russia. In the end, my host led me down a hall to a small reading room, offered me a chair, and left the room. I picked up a copy of the Soviet magazine New Times, and began to read this description of the foreign policy of the new “atmosphere of trust” of the 1920s. An interesting observation of this year setting forth America’s policy program (President Eisenhower’s messages and Dulles’ speeches) again confirmed that the Bush of America policy is an attempt to establish domination, and that it is the way in which explains why reaction and containment are rampant not only in the United States but in all the capitalist countries under its control.

I must confess that, after several minutes had elapsed, I felt an overpowering desire to see if the door was locked, and a momentary regret that I had told no one where I was going. My vision of becoming the latest victim of the cold war soon evaporated, however, with the return of my host, who sat down and showed me attractive postcard views of the Russian universities. Realizing that even Kennan looks good on postcards, I was not deceived into applying immediately for a passport to Siberia. After collecting two sets of Russian postcards, a Soviet biography, and a bundle of Times “news” releases, I shook hands with my host and walked out again into the storm.

The weather quickly cleared up, but my visit continued to produce general interest. I left the embassy with a feeling that I had stepped back the picture with a hidden telephoto lens, here and in another, to the 1920s. But I knew, as I walked away, that I was undoubtedly now on the Attorney-General’s list of the ten most wanted Communists in America. Naturally, I shrugged off such tales as the figure of speech or a free imagination. For my visit was a small contribution to international good will and understanding. But my surprise was not lessened by Mr. Dulles’ and associate more closely with certain of the Embassy staff, we took heed of the rumors, and fearing that we might be labeled security risks at some future date, we decided to ask the advice of the Federal Bureau of Investigation. He referred me to the Washington Branch of the FBI from the office of J. Edgar Hoover, we were escorted along confidential corridors, and shown into a small room where we had been shown several men wearing FBI badges and cards in our face, two agents heard our story. Thinking it rather conducive of us to share the FBI, we were surprised by him, and totally unprepared for the extensive “grilling” that followed. Our words were recorded by one of the agents, who would exceptionally step by name or date straight. After I had explained the concern of my friends over my trip to the Embassy, and lightly avoided my assurance of any monotonous conspiracy, I was questioned approximately as follows:

What made you want to go to the Russian Embassy in the first place? That is a question I go to answer.

Oh, I don’t know. I suppose just because they are Russians there; it’s on the budget.

Well, why didn’t you go to the French Embassy—there are French nationals.

I was asked the date of my visit, the time of day, length of stay, description of my host, topic of conversation, and whether I had learned anything from the literature I was given. As we were about to leave, our interrogators decided that we needed more information. Specifically, the FBI agents asked me what I thought of the pictures, colors, eye color, military men’s names, and other vital data. As we began to read, we had no idea that there were two agents behind us. They were surprised by the fact that the FBI is unable to give advice, the implication was cleared—

This was asking, however, a question that is not beyond the pale of the FBI’s scope, even the unimportant.

Inclined at first to look with disfavour upon our involution, we soon developed an appreciation for the thorough efforts of the FBI to keep tabs on any movement that might possibly endanger the security of our country. But if you come to Washington, take my advice—visit the Canadian Embassy. It’s safer.

Returning Letterman Spark Cider Men; Wooster Faces Major Rebuilding Season
by Dan Reiman

"In the spring a young man's fancy lightly turns to thoughts of love."

This year's Wooster Scot cider men face what is known in coach's discussions as a rebuilding year. Coach Carl Munson, when asked if comment on the prospects for the year, would not commit himself, reminding this reporter that the squad has run no time trials as yet this season. However, it was apparent from the course of the interview that Coach Munson, while expecting some stellar performances by individuals, was assuming a wait-and-see attitude toward the season in general.

Losses Hurt

Wooster's track team this year is missing several men from the 1954 squad. Chief losses were those of Rich Vohkel and Bill Prevy, who graduated last spring. Vohkel holds the conference high jump record, and Prevy was one of the better dash men in the conference last year. John Lamb, letterman last year, has not reported for track this fall, and George Dowkins, a point-winner, was over taken by Uncle Sam in his last race.

Letterman Return

On the brighter side, Coach Munson has back in uniform four lettermen, Fred McKenzie, Bob Duvall, Ken K, and Bill Stoope. McKenzie runs middle distance; Kero runs the mile and two-mile; Stoope runs the quarter and broad jumps, and Raffin throws the shot and discus. In addition, the team should be strong--

Munson Misses Volleyball Game; Fifth Section Sinks Faculty Team
by Paul Martin

"This is the first time in my 34 years at Wooster that the students have won a volleyball game with the faculty and they had to do it without Munson." These were the words of track coach Carl B. Munson last Wednesday afternoon.

The genial mentor, who still exhibits the best of them on a volleyball court, was unable to play last Saturday as Fifth Section, the undefeated champions of the second straight year in the Hawaiian League, defeated the "pride of the professors" in two out of three games.

Munson Records Past Games

I asked Munson if he could shed a little light on the rivalry between the two divisions. He led me into the faculty dressing room in the gymnasium, and showed me a worn backpack with clothes hooks on it. Here he kept a record, through the years, of all the games that had been played in this series. These are the only records we could find, since the first game.

To Refresh Yourself During This Warm Winter Weather Drop In At The SHACK
Diamond Crew Sports Eight Lettermen; Freshmen Show Ability In Early Try-Outs

by Bill Moats

As daylight lingers a little longer every day now, the sharp accented shouts and the sound of cracking bats can be heard reverberating from the stadium diamond. Coach Mel Rubie’s squad of 46 hopefuls has slowly been weeded out and the remaining 24 players fast as the weather permits.

OratATIONAL Group holds Preliminary

The Local Civic Oratory Contest to be held on Saturday, April 16, will be a preliminary from which the fourth contestant to the Regional Delta Sigma Phi Contest will be chosen. Three other College of Wooster students, Ralph Schilling, David King, and Edward Treni, will also attend the contest held at Wooster University in April 22 and 23. The theme for this legislative type competition will be, "How Can the American Educational System Best Meet the Needs of...

Wooster Netmen Open With Otters; 12 Ohio Conference Foes On Slate

by Mae Hazel

With warm and balmy weather making slight indications that "spring is finally here," the 1955 Scott netmen sprouted to the clay courts and wielded their rackets in anticipation of a winning season as they prepared for their initial match with Otterbein tomorrow afternoon at 2:00 on the home courts. The Scots are scheduled to face Denison next Monday, April 18.

Coached by Jack Behringer, the Scots face a stiff slate of competition in the form of 12 Ohio Conference rivals and not one-conference squad.

Three Lettermen

The Scott rawboners will be bolstered by Lettermen Jim Lindsay, Mark Bryer, and Don Garcia who have been selected as the first three men respectively. Other promising candidates are 1955 letter winners Paul Martin and Paul Davies, and freshmen Don Konig and Ed Breese. Bomig, a native of Portsmouth, Ohio, is a product of Lima South High School; while Breese hails from Tomsan, New Jersey.

“April Showers.” It will feature the eight-piece band of George Conaway. The chaperones for the evening will be Mr. and Mrs. Carter Drushel, Mr. and Mrs. William Stroup, and Mr. and Mrs. Alvin Stroup. General chairman for the dance is Mary Frank.

During intermission refreshments will be served, in addition to the previously announced Eighth Session Open House, Section and Fifth Session will also hold open houses during intermission.

NO MATTER WHERE YOU ARE, you'll get more pleasure from your cigarette if it's a Lucky Strike. That's the point of the Doodle above, titled: Three deep-sea divers enjoying Luckies. You get deep-down smoking enjoyment from Luckies because they taste better. Tobacco is just the same; whether you smoke it on the open sea or in your own father's. First of all, Lucky Strike means fine tobacco. Then, that tobacco is toasted to taste better. "It’s Toasted"—the famous Lucky Strike process—tones up Luckies' light, mild, good-tasting tobacco to make it taste even better... cleaner, fresher, smoother. So, when it’s light-up time, light up the better-tasting cigarette... Lucky Strike.
